THE WAR IN ITALY.

The Austrians in Full Retreat Towards the River Oglio.

A Turin dispatch says that after the retreat of the Austrians from Bologna, the Cardinal Legate departed and the Municipality proclaimed VICTOR EMANUEL Dictator.

The King of Sardinia had issued an order of the day extolling GARIBALDI, and awarding him a gold medal of the Military Order.

The official Wiener Zeitung says that the Emperor of Austria will forthwith assume the immediate command-in-chief, and had ordered a new position for his army, which would be taken up in the best manner.

The Austrians were evacuating Modena, and were in full retreat towards the River Oglio.

Large reinforcements were about to leave Franc for the army.

ADVANCE OF THE FRENCH ACROSS THE ADDA.

The Morning Post publishes the following dispatch, dated Paris, Tuesday night:

On the 12th, the Emperor removed his head quarters to Gorgonzola, (12 miles east-northeast of Milan.) In the afternoon His Majesty personally superintended the throwing of two bridges of boats over the Adda. The operation, which presented serious difficulties, was perfectly effected. As soon as the bridges were completed the army began its movement, which was to be concluded yesterday. After some heavy rains the weather has again become fine, and the troops are in high spirits.

PRUSSIAN ARMY MOBILIZED.

An order had been issued for the Mobilization of the Prussian army.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Lord PALMERSTON was making good progress in the construction of a Cabinet. The authentic list was expected to be made public on the day the Nova Scotian sailed. Rumor gives the Earl of ELGIN the Colonial Secretaryship, Mr. COBDEN the Presidency of the Board of Trade, and Mr. GLADSTONE the Secretaryship for India.

LATEST ENGLISH NEWS.

LONDON, Wednesday, June 15.

The Daily News says that Lord PALMERSTON is making satisfactory progression in the formation of his government, and having filled up the most important appointments, is proceeding to allot those of subordinate rank.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL will undertake the department of Foreign Affairs, and it is believed that Mr. GLADSTONE will join the Government.

Some of the evening papers, last night, published lists of the new Administration. It is proper the public should be informed that no authorized statement of the composition of the new Government can possibly appear before Friday.

The Herald (Lord DERBY'S organ) publishes a Berlin telegram that six Prussian corps d' armeé are mobilised. It says: "Of course this means war. The advent of Lord PALMERSTON to power has evidently induced Prussia to take this decisive step, and to join Austria in the struggle against France. The English people will now perceive the truth of what we have before asserted, that Lord DERBY'S Government alone preserved Europe from a general war.

The Post says that the formation of the new Cabinet is proceeding rapidly, and in the most satisfactory manner, and it hopes to-morrow to complete the publication of the ministerial arrangement.

The Advertiser believes that after Lord JOHN RUSSELL had accepted the office of Foreign Secretary any office in the Cabinet which he might prefer was offered to Sir JAMES GRAHAM. The Right Honorable Baronet, however, declined to accept any office, on account of the infirm state of his health, but assured Lord PALMERSTON that he would cordially support the new Ministry.

The papers of this morning abstain from publishing the rumors commonly current during a ministerial interregnum.

The Advertiser says that Lord PALMERSTON stated last night to some private friends, that his arrangements are so far completed that he hopes to be able to go down to Windsor Castle this evening, to submit the list to Her Majesty, or if not this evening, to-morrow morning, before Her Majesty leaves for Ascot.

The Daily News City Article of Tuesday evening says:

"The funds received a fresh impulse this morning, owing to the progress made in the constitution of a new Ministry, coupled with an increased hope that the war in Italy will not be of long duration. In the other markets decided buoyancy was again shown. On 'Change, this afternoon, there was a fair demand for bills on the Continent, and, as regards Hamburg, Frankfort, St. Petersburg and Naples, the tendency was less favorable for this country."

The Times City Article says:

"The statement regarding the progress of the formation of the new Ministry produced a good effect this morning, and Consols opened with real buoyancy. This led to several realizations, both on the part of speculators and the public, and a reaction took place, but the closing prices were 8 per cent. above yesterday's.

There were no bullion operations at the Bank today."

The Banking House of Messrs. FULLER & Co., of Moorgate street, is to amalgamate at the end of the present month with that of Messrs. TAPLE, BARARY & Co., of Lombard-street.

The Times City article contains a letter adverting to the affairs of Messrs. CARR, BROTHERS & Co., of Newcastle.

WAR IN LOMBARDY.

The Recent Battles—Three Victories for the Allies—Position of the Contending Armies—The Austrian Emperor Assumes the Chief Command of His Army—Probable Seat of the Next Great Battle—Incidents of the Conflict at Magenta.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Sunday, June 12, 1859.

Since the grand battle of Magenta three other battles have been fought, each resulting in favor of the French and Sardinian arms. The first of these was at Malegnano, the second at Canonica, and the third between Bergamo and the river Oglio.

The affair at Malegnano, a town twelve miles southeast of Milan, on the road to Lodi, (called by the French Marignan,) was fought between the armies of Marshal BARAGUAY D'HILLIERS on the French side, and Gen. BENEDEK on the Austrian side. NAPOLEON, finding that the Austrian army was in full retreat toward the Adda, sent BARAGUAY D'HILLIERS to cut them off in the direction of Lodi. Gen. GYULAI in turn had sent Gen. BENEDEK in that direction to cover his retreat, and to hold the French in check while he crossed the Adda at Pizzighettone, on the road to Cremona. Gen. BENEDEK, with 30,000 men, entrenched himself strongly at Malegnano, and awaited the French attack. The combat lasted nine hours, and resulted in the retreat of the Austrians, leaving the place in the hands of the French. As at Montebello, the latter part of the fight took place in the streets of the village. The Austrians barricaded themselves in the houses and were dislodged by the Zouaves by the bayonet, house by house. The French bulletin claims not to have had more than 15,000 men engaged; but Gen. FOREY'S division, which was present and formed the right wing, was not called into action. The two divisions engaged were those of the brave Gen. BAZAINE (to which the regiment of Zouaves of the Baraguay d'Hilliers corps d'armée is attached) and Gen. L'AMIRAULT. The Austrians lost 1,500 killed and wounded, and 1,200 prisoners; the French 800 in killed and wounded. In the night a body of Croats attempted to take the town from the French, but they were surrounded and cut off.

Canonica, where another of the battles was fought is a village on the east side of the Adda, twenty miles northeast of Milan, on the road to Bergamo. To this point the famous Gen. URBAN, who had been sent to the extermination of GARIBALDI at Como, had retreated; and here Marshal CANROBERT, sent by NAPOLEON for the purpose, caught up with the retreating General, and offered him battle. A Vienna dispatch says the battle was a bloody one. We only know at Paris that CANROBERT remained master of the field, and that the Austrians retreated in great haste toward Brescia.

From Como GARIBALDI followed Gen. URBAN nearly to Monza, and thus falling out of the line of country for which he had reserved himself the conquest, he abandoned the pursuit, and, striking northeast to Brivio, crossed the Adda at that point, and on the 8th entered Bergamo without resistance. The Austrians immediately sent a force from Brescia toward Bergamo, either to dislodge him from the latter place, or to impede his further progress east. GARIBALDI sent out a portion of his force to meet the Austrians, and, after a sharp engagement, put them to flight. We have no further details, but we would scarcely be astonished here if this bold and able chief were already at Brescia, within twenty miles of the great fortress of Peschiera, and at a point where one line of communication from the Tyrol with the Austrian base of operations is cut off. He will hardly retain this, however, without a struggle, for its possession to the Austrians is of the first importance, and we may expect to hear of some sanguinary battles in that direction.

It will be seen by casting the eye over the map that to-day the French and Sardinian flag floats on a line commencing at Bergamo on the north, and extending south to Canonica, Paullo, Lodi, Pavia and Piacenza. In other words, north of the meridian of Milan the allied flag is in advance of the Adda; south of that line it is up to the Adda. The position at present gives the impression that CANROBERT is going to join GARIBALDI in the attack on Brescia and Peschiera, while the great body of the army under the Emperor and King will advance upon Cremona and Mantua. The Austrians have placed a corps d'armée at Crespino on the Po, near the Adriatic, and another on the Adige, between Rovigo and Legnago, to prevent a flank movement from Bologna, Piacenza, or the Adriatic. The Emperor of Austria has left his headquarters at Verona to take command of the army in person, with General HESS as Major-General. A new conscription has been levied in Austria, which seems to imply that the boast that the whole nation was asking to volunteer, must have been a metaphor. Where the next grand battle will be fought it would be difficult to conjecture; it is hardly probable, however, that FRANCIS JOSEPH will allow the French and Sardinians to advance to the neighborhood of the Mincio without offering them resistance. The three monarchs will soon stand in each other's presence.

A body of 650 Austrians were cut off in the neighborhood of Lake Maggiore, as was expected, by the rapid move of the French upon Milan and Canonica, and these men, to save themselves from capture, passed into Swiss territory, where they were sent into the interior, as is the custom.

Thus we see that in ten days' time the French and Sardinian armies marched from Alessandria to Casale Vercelli, Novara, Buffalora, Milan, the Adda and even beyond, driving before them, and beating in six battles, an army certainly their equal in numbers and which had had more than a month's leisure to fix itself in position, and to prepare obstacles to the advance of its enemies. Moreover, it must be recollected that the attacking party had two difficult rivers to cross, which gave a great advantage to the retreating army. Considering the size of the armies, and the difficulty of moving large bodies rapidly, the campaign thus far is one of the most brilliant in history. In view also of the universal health that prevails, the losses have been large, for it cannot be less on the Austrian side than 40,000 men, if we include the last battles. Looking at the wide extent of country between the Sesia and the Adda, and at the fact that 300,000 Austrians were included therein, we think that every one must admit that to clear that space within a period of ten days constitutes a veritable rout, and establishes the true value of the contending forces. Another equally wide space lies between the Adda and the Mincio, and who will dare say it will require another ten days to clear this one?

What then are we to think of the Austrian journals and their man Friday, the London Times, which, eight days after the battle of Magenta, claim that immense feat of arms as a skirmish, as an undecided affair, as an event almost without importance to Austria? We expected falsehoods and specious arguments from the Austrian generals and Austrian journals, but the pretentious London Times ——?

A Belgian journal, printed at Charleroi, publishes a dispatch sent to it from Vienna, and which has been sent all over Germany, and Turkey as well, which claims that the battle of Magenta resulted in the total defeat of the French and Sardinians, who were forced to recross the Ticino! A cause must be not only a bad one, but a lost one, that has to be propped up by such means.

The Moniteur publishes, and you will receive by this mail, a detailed account of the battle of Magenta. It is not only an admirable, but it is without doubt a faithful history of that great event. It bears upon its face the evidence of its truthfulness, and no other facts have come to our knowledge to invalidate it. I is a fact that the first part of the battle on the French side was a mistake; that is to say, the Guard was too early in the action. I saw a private letter from an officer of ZOUAVES to a friend in this city, written on the field of battle the day after the action. The letter was written with a pencil, on a piece of crumpled paper, and gave briefly some interesting details. He said, "unfortunately we were too early in the action. The Guard had to sustain for two hours the whole shock of the Austrian army, before the other corps could arrive. In that time," he says, "we suffered fearfully. We went into action 1,000 Zouaves, and at the end of the battle we had but 500 men on their feet." This officer says that he had a bayonet thrust in the calf of the leg, which upset him, and he was taken prisoner; but two of his corporals dragged him from the Austrians. They fought in an extensive vineyard. When the enemy at last retreated, fifteen of his Zouaves boldly followed after 600 retiring Austrians, and bayoneted a considerable number of them. This officer estimates the number of French in action at 80,000, exclusive of Sardinians. The Guard suffered much the most in proportion.

The Emperor's proclamation to the Italians is regarded here as a response to the insulting remarks of Lord DERBY, in the House of Lords on Tuesday last. After this Proclamation we shall be curious to see whether the English will still regard the war as having been commenced under "false pretences," and as a war for conquest.

The fall of the Derby Cabinet produced great rejoicing at Paris, with a rise in the State funds of a franc.

Six thousand Austrian prisoners have arrived in France, at the ports of Toulon and Marseilles.

MALAKOFF.

THE FIELD OF MALEGNANO.

Napoleon III. on the First Great Battle.

From LOUIS NAPOLEON'S "Histoire de l'Artillerie" we translate the following clear and interesting account of the great battle fought by the French at Malegnano, in 1515, under FRANCIS I.:

In 1515 FRANCIS I. marched upon Italy at the head of a numerous army, composed of 18,000 Lansquenets, including a legion of 6,000 veterans, famous for their bravery, and styled the Black Band; of 6,000 French volunteers, 4,000 Gascons, 2,500 men-at-arms, 1,500 light horse, and the gentlemen and archers of the Household Guard. His artillery consisted of about 74 heavy pieces, 2,500 pioneers, and 5,000 horses. Moreover, we read in the Memoirs of Fleurange that PEDRO NAVARRA had caused to be made a kind of park containing a sort of artillery invented by that young adventurer, which was only two feet long, and fired fifty balls at a time, and worked very well; "and PEDRO had made at Lyons three hundred pieces of this kind, before unheard of, and they were carried before the King's army on mules." On the strength of this passage, BRUNET and MORITZ MEYER have maintained that grapeshot was used at Marignano; and Captain BACH has related as a fact that FRANCIS I. had in his train 300 guns firing fifty balls at a time. In our opinion, the above passage proves one thing only, that ROBERT DE LA MARCK, Lord of SEDAN and STEMANGE, had caused little pieces to be made like those used by NAVARRA at the siege of Ravenna, which placed in rows on a car or easel, were fired off all at once, and in this opinion we are confirmed by finding traces of the same contrivance in the inventing of the artillery of the Chateau de Sedan, drawn up Oct. 10, 1642, in which we read of "250 little iron cannons as long as heavy pistols, with screws at the breach to be fastened down like organ pipes." As this invention is attributed to the Lord of Sedan, it was probably preserved in his castle down to this date.

The Swiss held towards Piedmont all the known passes of the Alps, and it was hard to pass the mountains with the army and its baggage in the face of these hardy warriors. By the advice of TRIVULZI it was determined to turn those positions. The only roads used up to that time by the French armies descending into Italy were the Mont Cenis and the Mont Genevre. FRANCIS resolved to traverse the Col d'Argentiere and enter Italy by the valley of the SUSA. He accordingly divided his artillery into two parties, took his field-pieces with himself, and sent his heavy guns under a good escort by the road which CHARLES VIII. had formerly taken over the Mont Genevre to SUSA.

Although the main body had only light pieces with it, the passage of the Alps was very difficult. Rocks had to be blown up, the guns taken to pieces and carried over piece by piece, or swung across ravines by pullies in the trees. The Swiss did not think the French coming, says PAULUS JOVIUS, because they thought the French, depending as they did on their artillery, could not get it over the Alps But on learning the successful passage of the Alps they retired on Turin, drawing their guns after them for want of horses. Come near the little town of Chivasso, they found no boats to pass the little river Orca, and if we are to believe the chronicles, made a bridge of ropes and sent their guns over. The French army followed them very near, camping every night in order of battle: but often delayed by the baggage, which was always sent on in front. Arrived in Lombardy, FRANCIS I., in order to hinder the Swiss at Milan from joining the Papal troops at Cremona, and to help his own junction with the Venitians at Lodi, established his camp across the road from Malegnano to Milan. The French army, whose right rested on the little river Lambro, was drawn up in three lines. The advanced guard was fixed at St. Guiliano, in a place called Gemille by PASQUIERA, surnamed the "Unfrocked Monk;" the main body, with the king, held the Cassine de St. Brigitta—the rear at a bow-shot behind. Each division, formed of from 4,000 to 9,000 infantry, had the cavalry in its wings, and the artillery in batteries commanded the approaches. PIERRE DU NAVARRA, with the Gascon crossbow-men, was on the right of the road, defended by hasty entrenchments. The ground, cut up by small canals, offered natural defences for the artillery of the vanguard. As the French had learned since the defeat of Novara to dread the Swiss impetuosity, it was thought best to protect the artillery in this way.

The Swiss, 30,000 strong, with some Milanese and cavalry, left Milan to attack the French army, having with them 10 pieces of artillery. In their ranks were veterans of Nanci and Morat. To be more free in their movements they had taken off their caps and shoes. They were divided into three great battalions—a small troop of horse covered the artillery. In front of the central battalion marched 2,000 enfants perdus. A glorious name, says JOVIUS; for these soldiers, advancing madly, the first, were held to march on certain death. Supported by four pieces of artillery posted near a cassine on the highway, this band began the attack, and marched directly on the artillery. They threw the French cavalry into disorder; closing up in mass repulsed the Lansquenets and Gascons, and took seven guns, when the French Free-Companions and Men-at-Arms came up. The Men-at Arms easily rode down the front, but stopped before the central phalanx of Swiss pikes. The Swiss extended their lines to envelop the Gascons, and as the broken ground was unfavorable the Gascons slowly fell back. The bold sons of the Alps pushed on heedless of the artillery. The Lasquenets returned to the charge beyond the ditches. The Swiss let seven or eight ranks pass by and then overthrew them. While the whole centre is in confusion, a second Swiss battalion contests the right with Navarra, and a third beaten back by the guns, endeavor to turn a rising ground and take the French left in the rear. The repulsed vanguard of France finds itself forced to fall back upon the Second Division. Then the King comes forward with the main body, including the Black Band, and orders ALENCON to follow with the rear. He establishes a strong battery on his flank and takes the Swiss en echarpt. The mêlee grows general. Four thousand Swiss are cut off from the rest and broken by the King, at the head of 200 men-at-arms. Excited by success, FRANCIS dashes at another battalion, 8,000 strong, attempting to turn his position, but is driven back: as he himself says, "The front rank thrust 600 pikes in my face." These alternations of success and failure disorder both armies. Happily for the French, the Seneschal d'Armagnac or Head Master of the Artillery, withdraws the cannons exposed in the front ranks and posts them further in the rear. This affords a rallying point. FRANCIS I. takes refuge here with 25 men-at-arms and recalls his scattered troops. The sun had now gone down, but the fight went on here and there by moonlight. At last the sky is covered with clouds, and all remain motionless, wherever they are, for fear of stumbling on the enemy.

The Swiss encamped close by the French artillery without suspecting it. FRANCIS ordered all fires to be put out. The Swiss lighted one, and assembled around it a council of war. The blaze drew the fire of the French artillery, which rapidly broke the council up in a fright. The next day at daybreak FRANCIS had put his artillery mainly in the centre, behind a ditch under charge of 6,000 lansquenets, and arrayed the guns in such order as to cross their fire in front of the French camp. He sent the Constable DE BOURBON to the right, and ALENÇON to the left, leaving PIERRE DE NAVARRA almost deserted on the right. A bas-relief, by PRIMITACCIO, on the tomb of FRANCIS I., at St. Denis, represents this moment of the battle.

The Swiss also had rallied in the night, and resolved to renew the attack with all their force. As soon as day broke the Swiss centre, bearing the standard of Zurich, marches straight on the post of the King. They are allowed to come within bow-shot; then the artillery, with a general discharge, make a great breach in the close column, 10,000 strong. BAYARD rides up to the artillery master, and recommends him to fire salvos of seven or eight pieces. The Swiss halted, brought up their guns and replied. Meanwhile the French left is broken, and 3,000 Swiss get as far as the baggage at St. Brigitta; happily D'AUBIGNY rallies his men, and the Venitian ALVIANO comes up with his cavalry, and restores the fight. The Swiss are driven into the village and destroyed. On the right the Constable had been successful also, his light cavalry covering the guns, and opening order for the successive discharges. The fighting, however, went on fiercely at the centre, the Swiss pushing forward far enough for one of them to lay his hand on a French gun; but the two French wings now closed in on them. The Swiss divided to make head, and were only at last overpowered by numbers. The 5,000 engaged were slain. Beaten, but still in good order, the Swiss fell back on Milan. They had lost, however, in the fight, that famous and ancient horde of URI, which had carried terror to the heart of the Burgundian army at Morat and at Nancy; and they had received a lesson on the madness of relying on one special order of attack, without due regard had to the changing circumstances of war.

Napoleonic Ideas.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In a notice of my translation of LOUIS NAPOLEON'S political work, entitled "Napoleonic Ideas," printed in your edition of this day, you make a remark calculated to mislead and to injure. You say that the translator should also have translated another work of LOUIS NAPOLEON, entitled "The Napoleonic Idea," which the critic affirms to be "a sketch or abstract" of "Napoleonic Ideas," and the critic finds fault that for this reason my translation is incomplete.

To this I reply, that the two works of LOUIS NAPOLEON are quite independent and distinct; that I have translated with fidelity the original work, entitled "Napoleonic Ideas," as first published in Brussels, in 1839, a fact stated on the title page and in the preface of the translation; that the work entitled "The Napoleonic Idea," was originally published in London in 1840—a year after the publication of "Napoleonic Ideas;" that the work entitled "The Napoleonic Idea," being as your critic justly observes, a sketch or abstract of "Napoleonic Ideas," it would be of doubtful propriety and of doubtful expediency to publish it as a part of, or preface to another work written and published at a different time, and in itself complete. It is true that "L'Idée Napoléonienne," is now bound up in the French edition of the works of NAPOLEON III., in the same volume with, and preceding "Les Idées Napoleoniennes;" but this simply shows that the editor of the complete works of LOUIS NAPOLEON has done his duty; it by no means authorizes the critic to assert that the translator of one of the works has performed his task incompletely, because he has not translated and annexed another.

I do not intend to intimate that a translation of "The Napoleonic Idea" would not be useful as an abstract of "Napoleonic Ideas," and interesting upon its own account. I am, sir, yours, respectfully,

NEW-YORK, June 25, 1859. JAMES A. DORR.

Garibaldi and Colonel Forbes.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The New-York Herald of June 18, inst., reported a correspondence of the London Star, which, alluding to the then believed defeat of GARIBALDI, insinuated that all his successes, in his former campaigns, were entirely due to a Colonel Hugues Forbes, a cool-headed Englishman, who formerly lived upon ample means at Vienna and took part in the Italian Revolution of 1848 and '49. No one took pains to deny that statement, because it was too absurd and not indorsed by the Herald. In some way or other, however, the same pretended correspondence, only slightly altered, has found its way into the NEW-YORK TIMES of June 24, inst. Without entering into any discussion in regard to Mr. FORBES I feel bound in justice to GARIBALDI, to state here, that the great deeds of valor and military skill of GARIBALDI were all previous to his acquaintance with Mr. FORBES. This gentleman, I recollect well, offered his services to the Roman Republic and desired to go to Rome during the Spring of 1849. But as there were already several foreign officers in Rome, and the policy of that Government was to give them employment, but no important command, Mr. FORBES was directed to take care of a few new recruits who were drilling in the towns of Fuligno and Terni, one hundred miles north of Rome. It was after the downfall of Rome, the defence of which has been the greatest deed of GARIBALDI, that he, in his retreat, passing through Terni took with him the recruits and with them Mr. FORBES, to whom GARIBALDI gave a command. But their connection lasted hardly two weeks, for having arrived at San Marino, GARIBALDI disbanded his little army and with few companions, among whom was Mr. FORBES, went to Cesenatico and sailed for Venice, but being overtaken by an Austrian man-of-war GARIBALDI saved himself by swimming, and his companions were made prisoners of war and liberated with in two months at the downfall of Venice which ended the war. A ROMAN.

INTERESTING FROM WASHINGTON.

The Proposition to Rent the Public Warehouses to Private Individuals—Trial of Firearms—The Contemplated Fillibuster Descent on Nicaragua—Army Promotions, &c., &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 27.

Among other reforms suggested by Collector SCHELL is the renting out of public Warehouses to private individuals. Messrs. MATHER and BIXBY, of the firm of MATHER, McINTIRE & BIXBY, are pressing their proposition to take the Warehouses for a specified sum, and do all the public business, including carting, &c. JAMES B. CRAIG entered a competition bid, but an arrangement has been made by which all parties become equally interested in the first proposition. Mr. MATHER is said to be the protegé of the Collector, and that the lease would be worth some fifty thousand dollars per annum to the parties if it can be secured. Mr. BARR, member of Congress, arrived here this morning, and had an interview with Secretary COBB. He entered a strong protest against the whole scheme, and left for New-York this afternoon, with an intimation from head-quarters that the speculation would not succeed. If worth fifty thousand per annum, says Mr. COBB, to private individuals, why should it not be worth the same to Government, if properly managed. If the public warehouses are to be farmed out because they can be more economically managed, it might be well to consider the propriety of farming out the whole Government, as it could be administered as a private enterprise, at one-half the present cost. Mr. COBB assured Mr. BARR that the per diem compensation of laborers should not be reduced, even if the warehouses were to be leased out.

Secretary FLOYD is about issuing an order for the trial of all the newly-invented guns, to take place at Fort Monroe—Old Point Comfort—some time next month. SAWYER'S rifle cannon is to be beaten, if possible.

The Government received nothing to-day from Mexico. The reported seizure of specie by ROBLES is regarded by the Administration as highway robbery, but beyond the reach of present punishment.

No European dispatches are yet received by the steamer Bremen, but some of an interesting character are expected to-night.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 27.

Information has been received from a source regarded as thoroughly reliable, giving the particulars of the contemplated fillibuster descent on Nicaragua. The names of certain parties who sustain WALKER with arms and money are given, and the enjoyment of the benefits of the transit route are to compensate, in part, for the expenses thus incurred. It is stated that the expedition will start by the middle of August: that a party of fillibusters will rendezvous at Florida, and be conveyed to Central America in the Scottish Chief. Whether or not this information is strictly true, it is certain our Government will endeavor to arrest all such illegal enterprises, the orders to our naval vessels, for this purpose, heretofore issued, being still in full force. General JESUP, before he left for Nicaragua, was fully informed of the fillibustering movements.

The Board contemplated by former orders of the War Department, to be convened for the examination of non-commissioned officers, recommended for promotion, will be composed of the Instructor of Tactics, the Professor of Mathematics, and the Professor of Ethics, at the Military Academy, and will meet at West Point, on the first Monday in September annually. Enlisted men serving with troops, will not hereafter be allowed commutation of rations.

The Mexican News by the Tennessee.

NEW-ORLEANS, Monday, June 27.

The Tennessee has arrived up, and we have the following additional Mexican intelligence:

The conducta of five millions of specie arrived at Jalapa on the 10th inst., and remained there a week by the orders of General ROBLES for examination. It started again on the 16th, under a permit from Gen. ROBLES, but when near the National Bridge he overtook it and ordered its return to Jalapa, by the authority of MIRAMON. The conducta refused to obey the order, when General ROBLES ordered it to be shipped aboard the British vessel off Sacrificios, but her commander refused to receive it, notwithstanding the orders of the French and English Ministers to do so. The conducta still remains at Reconada, subject to the orders of ROBLES.

DEGOLLADO was at Vera Cruz.

MIRAMON had collected half a million in duties on the conducta.

All English subjects had been banished from the Capital, Minister OTWAY acquiescing.

Governor Banks Visits the Institutions.

SPEECH BY GOVERNOR BANKS.

Yesterday, at the invitation of the Board of Governors, Governor BANKS, of Massachusetts, who is in this City, temporarily, made a tour of inspection of our Island Institutions. The party which accompanied him was quite select. It embraced the Hon. J. B. HASKIN, Supervisor PURDY, Justice WELSH, Commissioners GRAY and STRONG, of the Central Park, STEPHEN B. RUSSELL, Esq., Ex-Alderman TROTTER and others. Governors SMITH, MOLONEY and OLIVER did the honors of the occasion. After passing through Bellevue Hospital, the party went up to Randall's Island. Some three hundred children were ready to receive them. After they had been reviewed, the children were drawn up in the gymnasium. Governor SMITH introduced Governor BANKS to them, and saying that he understood one of the children was prepared to welcome their visitor, asked him to come forward.

Master RYAN stepped out from the ranks and made a neat little speech. He greeted their visitor from Massachusetts, the State of HANCOCK, ADAMS and WEBSTER, and alluded to the gratification which he, (the speaker,) with ten of his companions, experienced from a visit which they made to Boston some two years since. In conclusion, he referred to the golden opinions Governor BANKS gained while Speaker of the House, and expressed the hope that he might find that the charitable institutions of New-York were well and worthily administered.

Gov. BANKS made a brief but an exceedingly appropriate and eloquent reply. He thanked the speaker and his young companions for their welcome, and accepted the tender of their hospitalities with a deep and sincere emotion of gratitude. This was one of the pleasantest occasions in which he had ever participated. Though mingling continually with the charities of the day, he had never before seen any manifestations on so extended a scale. Neither had he seen in all the institutions he had visited boys like those before him who exhibited so much intelligence. The education which they were receiving now, and the constant drilling which they were subjected to, they would feel the benefit of through life. He thanked them for the regard they had shown to the Commonwealth which he represented. The commerce of the whole country owed much to the energy and to the industry of New-York. But one thing the boys should not forget. The great God who governs all was no respecter of persons. The success in life of those whom he addressed is as certain, if they would persevere, as if they were born in the most favored lots. It is not the favor of friends or of fortune that supports men and carries them through to prosperity. It is the energy to do that which is necessary and the intelligence which directs these efforts which is necessary. They had the future before

Message of the President of Buenos Ayres—Public Education—Financial Improvement—The Impending War—Dictator Lopez III—Changes in the Buenos Ayrean Ministry—Movements of Troops—Counter-Manifestos of the Argentine and Buenos Ayrean Governments.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BUENOS AYRES, Tuesday, May 10, 1859.

On the 1st inst. the Legislature of this State was opened by Governor ALSINA in person. His Message, which is a straightforward and statesmanlike document, gives us a true account of the extraordinary advance of this country, the only point of South America which enjoys a truly Republican rule. Notwithstanding the severe commercial crisis which, sweeping over the world, seemed to take special pleasure in spending its greatest force upon the cities of Hamburgh and Buenos Ayres; notwithstanding the constant incursions of the Pampa Indians and the cowardly commercial war of URQUIZA, we have trebled our exportations in many articles, and in all others have far exceeded the mark of any previous year. To the administration of Dr. ALSINA is also owing the settlement of the long-pending debt question with the English bondholders, and the punctual payment of the quotas as agreed upon. This debt already stands at 89-90, and we have a just right to suppose that if peace is preserved here, another year will bring it up to par.

But the brightest page in the advancement of Buenos Ayres is found in the Segundo Informe del Gefe del Departamento de loculas, the second report of the Chief of Public Schools. The great prog ess acquired in this—the most important Department of all Republican progress—does more to give us faith in the salvation of these regions of the world, than all else however advanced or well administrated. The Legislature of this State has been the first as yet in Spanish America which has voted large sums of money for the public schools, and the increase since the last report presented in 1856, in spite of isolation and both commercial and personal hostility against Buenos Ayres, has been 69 schools and 2 743 scholars. Buenos Ayres now educates in her public schools with a population at the outside of 120 000 souls, more children than either Lima, or Rio de Janeiro—this latter containing 260,006 inhabitants.

Absolutely, the whole of this immense advance since the fall of ROSAS is due, firstly, to the absence of the tyranny of General URQUIZA, and, secondly, to that firm republican and friend of the United States, Don DOMINGO F. SARMIENTO. He is the Superintendent of these schools, and the author of the report now before us, and his name should be known to all Americans as the first South American to throw aside the prejudices of race and religion, and to go and study the institutions of the United States with an "humble and contrite spirit." The result has been that, added to his singular courage and uprightness, we are at last like to reverse in Buenos Ayres the verdict which universal mankind has long since passed upon the Spanish-American people. SARMIENTO has lately read before the Athenæum here, a eulogy upon the departed historian PRESCOTT, which, like all his works, breathes that pure love of American institutions and literature which distinguishes him above all other Argentines. Through long years of exile, poverty and desperate struggles with the world, SARMIENTO is one of the very few who never at any time, for any cause, bowed the neck to tyranny. And now, that it is fashionable here in the party of liberty, to quote and to strive to imitate the United States in their noblest institutions, let all honor be given to the pioneer in this good work among his countrymen.

There is no longer any room for doubt that the rents of this State are steadily increasing, notwithstanding the law of differential duties which was passed by URQUIZA last Congress, and went into operation here on the first of the new year. They are considerably over $100,000,000 paper money, to about $5,000,000 silver. The expenses last year were $92,000,000; estimates for the present fiscal year are $89,000,000. In fact, the resources of this State are more than double—fully three-fifths those of the other thirteen Provinces; the receipts on the other side of the Arroyo del Medio having never exceeded $2,000,000 silver. The few months during which this iniquitous law of differential duties has held sway have given already sufficient proof that it has been more a suicide for the upper Provinces than harmful to us here. Although it brings much distress to all classes, it is but natural that the poorest should suffer most, as also that many of the products of the Provinces, such as the dried fruits, raisins, &c., of Mendoza, which found their greatest consumption in this city, shou'd now find no purchasers.

But all the flattering and true statements of Governor ALSINA in reference to the prosperity of Buenos Ayres are overshadowed by the melancholy forebodings of war, which agitate the public mind throughout the whole region of the Plate, and to which the last few sentences of his message are dedicated. Although since my last per ship Parana, Captain LARGSTON, nothing has occurred to shake my belief in the continuance of peace, we might as well be at open war, save the shedding of blood. The Governor presented to the Legislature last week a special message in reference to its declaration by URQUIZA, asking the proper authorities to create a credit of $20,600,000 paper, as also to order the National Guard or militia beyond the frontiers of the State if necessary. In eight hours after it was submitted to debate, his recommendations had become the law of the land, passing both Chambers by a perfect unanimity: two members only being absent from physical causes. This Message of Governor ALSINA is beyond all question the best State paper with which we are acquainted, as emanating from any branch of the Spanish-American people. Calm and patriotic, it narrates with truth, and without verbosity or exaggeration, the history of the present difficulties, which are brought about exclusively by the ambition, revenge and avarice of one man—General URQUIZA. It explains in few words the basis upon which the Argentine Confederation is supported, and which alone has prevented BUENOS AYRES from joining it; and after relating the unswerving peaceful and fraternal conduct of Buenos Ayres towards its sister States, since the siege of 1853, exculpating it from all blame in the possible results of the present war, he accepts the gauntlet thrown down by URQUIZA, with the assurance that BUENOS AYRES will not be the first to cry peccavi.

In accordance with the authorization of the Chambers, Buenos Ayres has begun to arm herself, and the militia are drilled every week throughout the State, having been thoroughly clothed and armed. These steps taken by the Administration of Dr. ALSINA, we consider as dictated by a proper sense of independence and patriotic integrity, and as the very best means of preserving the peace, and forcing Gen. Urquiza to quietly surrender his Presidential post when its constitutional term has expired. A man who has been covered by so many perjuries, and who has made a Constitution, only to suppress all real patriotism under its shadow; a Constitution which he has already violated more times in five years than it contains articles' cannot be permitted again to disregard it so far as to continue in the supreme power during his life. But his position—made as it has been by himself—is a false and untenable one under any circumstances. Either in peace or war his prestige is gone, and he must go the way of all Spanish-American tyrants. ROSAS has already sent out word from Southampton that he keeps a chair warm for him.

The effect of the firm stand taken by Buenos Ayres has been obvious and immediate. URQUIZA has not yet left his estancia of San Jose, nor has he—as his Constitution dictates—opened the Argentine Congress on the 1st of May, but has put it off until the 25th inst. His warlike movements have been limited to sending 500 men to Rosario, and in his proclamation to them, he says that they are sent there to defend that city from the attacks of Buenos Ayres. The upper provinces have not responded to his pronunciamentos, and a most marked dislike to war is clearly manifested on all sides. LOPEZ, of Paraguay, has deceived him, as he has ever done all persons with whom he has dealings, and refuses assistance. Thus it turns out that URQUIZA is daily losing his prestige even among his own people.

We regret to chronicle the burial in the Protestant Cemetery of this City of Lieut. S. S. BASSET, U. S. N. second-lieutenant of the United States brig Bainbridge. Mr. BASSET died suddenly of convulsions on the night of the 5th instant, when the brig was near Colonia. Her commander—accompanied by the brigs Perry and Dolphin, all three under the orders of the senior-officer, Captain STRETDMAN—returned to this City the following morning in a strong gale of wind. The succeeding day—Saturday, 7th instant—his remains were disembarked under escort of his brethren in arms—a guard of marines—and were generally accompanied by English officers and American residents; they were deposited as aforesaid, near the tomb of Mr. FORBS, of Boston, who died here many years ago, whilst United States Consul. The Episcopal service, with its noble belief in the salvation of the soul through the Saviour of mankind, and with its assurance that so, indeed, "Death is swallowed up in victory," was said whilst his body was consigned "to the ground: earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust," and three volleys from the Guard closed from his friends forever, all save the memory of the dead.

Mr. BASSET was from Washington City, of the class of 1841. He was a widower and left one daughter, now an orphan.

THURSDAY, MAY 12.

Yesterday a change of Ministry took place here which has given very general satisfaction, General FAPIOLA, one of the veterans of the War of Independence, resigned the War portfolio on account of his extreme age and consequent bad health. Colonel BARTOLOMI MITRE passes from the Foreign Affairs to the War Department, and will soon go to the country in campaign. After his departure, Ex Governor OBLIGADO will take his place, and the Foreign Affairs is supplied by Dr. DALMACIO VELEZ SARSFIELD. These two latter gentlemen are now Senators, and a new election must be held to fill their vacancies. No better men could have been selected, and SARSFIELD, in particular, is probably the most distinguished Argentine statesman and lawyer now alive, and a most ardent admirer of the United States in more than words.

The Government has ordered the march of 1,000 of the National Guard to the frontier. LOPEZ, of Paraguay, is said to be very sick—quien sabe? if this is not a pretext to neglect sending his arbiter to Washington, though it may well be time for him to go "Where the good niggers go."

FRIDAY, May 13.

The rapid march of events at present brings us something of importance every day. Yesterday the new Ministry entered energetically upon their duties. Another steamer has been bought, and the two steamers General Pinto and Buenos Ayres have left for the interior rivers.

One thousand of the National Guard have been detailed for immediate service upon the frontier, and the re-formation of the Spanish and Italian legions—which did such good service against URQUIZA during the siege of 1853—decreed. General HOMOS has already marched to the frontier, at the head of eight hundred men.

In the Legislature, additional laws have been passed in the character of reprisals, and as an answer to the decree of URQUIZA'S Government, under date of the 19th April last. In this decree, which was a virtual declaration of war, and was signed by every member of URQUIZA'S Cabinet, it was forbidden to issue paper money from the Buenos Ayres Bank; all foreign agents, including the Consuls, were required to report themselves at Paraná, and every officer of the Buenos Ayres Government, civil and military, is held responsible, in his properties and life, for every act of governmental authority, whether interior or exterior of the State of Buenos Ayres, and the Directors of the Bank are placed in the same category.

Buenos Ayres has returned the compliment, by action of her Legislature as follows: Decree No. 1 declares "General D. JUSTO J. DE URQUIZA, and all those who direct or indirectly contribute to make war on Buenos Ayres, responsible with their properties, for all the expenses necessarily accrued in repelling this unjust aggression.

All those private persons who lose their interests by occasion of the present war or its operations, have a right to indemnization from these same properties.

The call or hypothecation of all or any real estate property, moveables or immoveables, which belong to individuals who may have taken part in the war against Buenos Ayres, or should do so hereafter, and those who remain beyond the territory of the State, thus abandoning the post of honor, which they ought to take in with the army of the National Guard, is prohibited.

DECREE 2.—Declares traitors to the country all the natives of Buenos Ayres who have signed the pronunciamentos of the different towns of the Confederation, asking war against this State, and the extermination of its sons.

DECREE 3.—Prohibits all those who have signed such petitions from returning to Buenos Ayres without special permission to do so, and declining to two years' service upon the frontier all those guilty thereof who may be arrested within the State.

Though we are a strong friend to peace, and believe that our difficulties here will be sooner and more solidly arranged without than with war, we cannot but approve of these measures; they are taken in self-defence, and we doubt not will have a powerful influence in preventing an open rupture.

Should LOPEZ, of Paraguay, assist URQUIZA, in a quarrel to which he is no party, this Government will issue letters of marque to many hundreds of small sailing vessels, now lying idle in this port, owing to the differential duties, and manned by some 15,000 Italians, and will decree that all their prizes will belong to the capturers. This will settle LOPEZ in less than no time, and leave but small assets for the American claimants.

A Busy Week in Richmond—German Celebration of Whit-Monday—Three Italians Drowned in James River—Singular Love Affair—Attempt to Recover a Child from an Alleged Abandoned Woman—Strange Story in Connection Therewith—Laying the Corner Stone of a New Catholic Church—Laying the Corner Stone of a New Masonic Temple.

From Our Own Correspondent.

RICHMOND, Va., Monday, June 20, 1859.

The past week has been one of unusual excitement, a variety of incidents having occurred to disturb the usual quiet of this city. Whit-Monday was celebrated as usual by the Germans, who assembled for the purpose at one of the Gardens, and, inasmuch as it is one of the annual holiday seasons for the colored population, country negrodom was largely represented in town,—some to sell the proceeds of their extra labor; and others to spend the little money they had accumulated since last holiday, in seeing the Richmond elephant, whilst the town boys, "dressed to death," spent the season in luxurious ease. The numerous tobacco factories were closed during Monday and Tuesday, to allow their colored operatives this season of repose and enjoyment. On Monday, my servant, usually very attentive, was not to be found, and upon inquiry I ascertained that he had gone into the country to see his wife, which his owners allowed him to do twice a year—at Christmas and Whitsuntide. On Wednesday he reappeared, but seemed to be unhappy. During his absence from his wife, an event had occurred which increased the wealth of his master, but filled his own heart with sadness. He felt as a father, but mourned the fate of his offspring as a slave.

There is a vast difference in the appearance of the country bordering on the James and Hudson rivers. After losing sight of Richmond, in a sail down the river, you will see no beautiful mansions, and but few evidences of civilization. The shores and banks of the stream appear to be in their primitive condition, with the rare exception of an occasional cultivated field, in which a few slave men and women may be seen at work.

A few days ago five Italians, Louis Botto, Louis Arrata, Peter Mazonta, Francis Javasco and Jaconia Cornia, left the city in a sail boat upon a pleasure excursion. During their progress a flaw of wind struck the boat, filled her with water, and finally the whole party found themselves struggling for life in the rapid, muddy current, with no one to assist them. JAVASCO, CORNIA and MAZONIA were drowned. Their bodies have been recovered and buried. MAZONTA was quite a young man, and is said to have left funds in the hands of the family with whom he lived. He had relatives somewhere in the United States, who may be benefited by this notice

A remarkable love affair has occupied the public mind for some days. A young man, named JERRARD J. WILLIAMS, of a highly respectable family, visited the daughter of Mr. CARTER, also a respectable citizen of Henrico. Mr. WILLIAMS was clerk in a large wholesale establishment in this city, and Miss INDIANA CARTER was a most respectable, beautiful and accomplished young lady. She received the visits of WILLIAMS at her father's house until he left Richmond and obtained employment in New-York, when he corresponded with her. Early in January last, Miss CARTER gave birth to a child, having, up to that time, concealed her indiscretion. Upon the heel of this event, Mr. CARTER made his way to New-York, in search of WILLIAMS—found him—told him the story of his wrongs and his grief—whereupon WILLIAMS promised to return and make the amende honorable by marrying Miss C., and the two returned to Richmond. A marriage license was obtained, and Rev. Mr. WILLIS was sent for to perform the solemn ceremony. Upon his arrival the clergyman refused to marry them until the young man had been apprised of the birth of the child, of which fact it appears, he had not heard. This being done, WILLIAMS refused to marry, alleging that his intimacy was too recent to produce any such results. A furious war of words ensued, and to prevent serious consequences, both parties were arrested, taken before a magistrate, and bound over to keep the peace, and the match was broken off, and next morning WILLIAMS returned to New-York. No publicity was given to the affair, and it was suppozed to be at an end.

On Monday last WILLIAMS returned to the city on a temporary visit—Mr. CARTER heard of his reappearance, and had him arrested on a charge of attempting an abortion, by administering sundry powders and pills to Miss CARTER. The day of trial was appointed, but when it arrived, Miss C., who was to be the principal witness, was not able to be in Court, having the day previous swallowed an ounce of laudanum to destroy herself. The timely application of a stomach pump, however, defeated her design. The trial was postponed, and the whole affair was subsequently left to referees, both parties agreeing to abide by the decision, which has not yet been made.

Since writing the above the referees have made their report. They say they are satisfied a marriage engagement existed between the parties, and that WILLIAMS' plea, for refusal to marry, is not valid, but that he is the father of the child. Still, they say that no adequate reparation can be made for the injury inflicted, and that, considering the present feelings of the parties towards each other, marriage is not required or justifiable, as it would seem but a mockery of reparation to assume vows which neither can conscientiously take. They close their report with the following remarkable paragraph:

"The Committee moreover decide that there shall be no further prosecution of the matter at law, remembering the words—"Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." The hand of the great Hester can bind up the wounds which have been inflicted on the innocent connections, and to Him they would with tenderest sympathy commit them."

Some three years ago, Mrs. MAGILL, of this city, was in Philadelphia, and to procure a child, presented herself to the Lady Managers of the "Northern Home for Friendless Children," as an applicant for a little girl. She represented herself as a person of wealth and high respectability, and a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. This being deemed sufficient, she obtained a girl five years of age, named MARY DE GRACE HOLT, the child of a poor, hard-working woman, but being unable to support it, sent it to the "Home." Recently, the Managers ascertained that Mrs. MAGILL was an abandoned woman, and that all her representations, except as to wealth, were false, whereupon, they informed the mother of the child, who, on Saturday last, obtained a writ of habeas corpus, commanding MAGILL to produce the child. The trial will take place next week, the woman, in the meantime, being held to bail in the sum of $5,000.

It is related of Mrs. MAGILL, that some years ago, she resided in Baltimore with her husband; they lived unhappily together and he said she threatened to poison him. Suddenly, he disappeared—his body, dead or alive, could not be found, and it was supposed that she had murdered him. She was arrested upon suspicion, and the case remained undetermined for some three years—still, the body of the murdered man was not found. About the time of her husband's disappearance one of the U. S. war vessels went to sea on a three years' cruise, and when she returned, it was proposed to search among the crew for the missing man. This search was made, when the lost was found, and the dead husband appeared in Court, to establish the innocence of his wife. Mrs. MAGILL is said to be a woman of more than ordinary personal attractions, and to be owner of the Richmond Theatre.

On Sunday afternoon a large concourse of citizens assembled in Twenty-fifth street, between Grace and Broad streets, to witness the ceremony of laying the corner stone of St. Patrick's (Catholic) Church, upon which occasion Bishop MCGILL made an address of unusual interest, in which he explained the meaning of the ceremony.

On Monday, June 14, the ceremony of laying the corner stone of Union Henrico Lodge, No. 130, of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, took place on Twenty-fifth-street, Union Hill. A large concourse of ladies and gentlemen witnessed the ceremonies, which were performed by Richmond Lodge No. 10. The Knights Templars appeared on horseback, and added great interest to the scene. An appropriate address was delivered by B. R. WELLFORD, Esq.

General Sam Houston on Americanism.

General HOUSTON having been requested by a number of citizens of Texas to express his views of the American Party, replied in the following letter:

INDEPENDENCE, TEXAS, July 24, 1855.

GENTLEMEN: Your letter of yesterday's date was presented to me early in the afternoon. At the present time, I feel no hesitancy in expressing my opinion in relation to the American Order or its principles. I feel that my fellow-citizens, in whose service I have been so long engaged, are entitled to my views, which in their opinion may, in any way, effect the public interest. At an earlier period of the State canvass, it might have been charged upon me that I was endeavoring to influence the elections in our State; but as the election is so near at hand that my opinion cannot have general circulation, I cannot be charged with interference.

You may rest assured that, in relying on my candor and sincerity, you will meet with no disappointment. Owing to the heated state of the public mind, the influence of Federal patronage, and the desperate efforts which are making to smother American sentiment and quiet the upheavings of the American mind, I expect to receive a full share of vituperation and abuse. A belief, too, that the election in Virginia has strangled the efforts of the American people in regaining their legitimate rights and vindicating their inherent principles, is, to my belief, fallacious. I regard the result in the Virginia election as highly encouraging to the principles of the Order. The efforts were of the most Herculean and untiring order, within the State, and aided and backed by the Federal patronage. In a party contest in the State, any interference on the part of the Federal Administration, would have been deemed an outrage. As it is, the old orthodox State of Virginia has received and recognized the right of Federal interference in her State elections. The Democracy of Virginia will yet awake to the proper appreciation of the rights of their Commonwealth and the extent of their Federal power.

In treating of a subject that has been so generally and elaborately discussed as that of the American Order, it would be difficult to present anything original in the way of argument—hence my aim will be, to offer my deductions and conclusions from the facts and arguments of others, and to glance at the causes which have given rise to the present excitement. The movement, I regard as one growing out of a great crisis in the affairs of our nation, and the precursor of a sound, healthful and vigorous nationality, which will be commensurate to solve and carry out the great principles of free Government, and to prevent the liberties of the country from being destroyed by the machinations of demagogue and factionist, whilst they continue to chant the Syren song of "no danger." At the same time, they cry out, beware of the danger of secret societies. It is true that secret societies have always been dangerous to despots and tyrants. They have even denounced and proscribed Masonry. The Pope with other potentates have crushed the ancient order in their dominions. In our country we have seen the portals leading into its sacred temples, for awhile closed and deserted. Secret societies were then denounced. Thank heaven, that cloud of fanaticism, which for awhile overshadowed it, has been dispelled by the light of reason, and it still continues to extend the blessings of its principles to thousands of disconsolate widows and orphans. The opponents of the American Order exclaim, it is a political association! and therefore ought not to be secret.

In reply, yes it is secret and its name denotes its objects. Is it the first secret political Sciety which has been organized in the United States? It is as well known as any other historical truth, that Gen. WASHINGTON and many of his compatriots of the Revolution, were members of the Cincinnati Society, in which, if I am not under misapprehension, no man is eligible to membership even now unless he is a native American, since the heroes who fought in the Revolution passed off the stage of life. Was not this a secret Society? Was it not purely political? Was not General WASHINGTON, at the time of his death, President of this Society? I should really like to know what the Anti-Americans think of this scrap of history. They cannot deny it. Then, I will ask them, what danger has grown out of this secret political Society which has existed in our country for more than half a century? The Columbian Order—known as the Tammany Society—highly influential, maintains its existence without danger to the liberties of the country.

General JACKSON was a member of this Society, and I know prominent statesmen, throughout the nation, who are members of it, and as I, myself am one, and understand its principles, I can assert they are patriotic and national. What say the Anti-Americans to these facts?

Can any sane man believe that Gen. WASHINGTON or Gen. JACKSON, would have united with any association or order not purely American? Would either have entered into any political league when secrecy was enjoined, if he had not approved of the principle of secrecy in political associations? From my knowledge of WASHINGTON, the sacrifices he made for his country, united with his fervid patriotism and his preference for everything American, I cannot doubt for one moment, if he were now living, he would cheerfully sanction the principles of the American Order. From my personal and familiar knowledge of the principles of Gen. JACKSON, I am confident that were he living, to counteract the policy of European potentates and statesmen, to throw upon our shores their refuse population of convicts and paupers, to pervert our ballot boxes and populate our poorhouses, he would most cordially sanction and inculcate the principles of the American Order. The instances which I have given of secret political associations, are not the only ones which have existed in our country, and which have been, and continue to be practiced by the two political parties.

Are not secret cancuses continually held by the political leaders of both parties in Congress? "O, yes, it will be answered, very true? but there is a necessity for this. We have to take care of our parties, to form plans for the people to carry out. And if we did not make platforms for them, they would not know how to vote upon important subjects." This explains much of the opposition to the present movement of the people. The action of the American order is only the pulsations of the American heart, which forces liberty through the heart of the masses, and will cause them to reclaim that power and influence which the arts of demagogues and assumptions of "party leaders," have appropriated to themselves, and generally allow the people to cast their votes in accordance with the caucus decisions whether secret or open. Should the American movement succeed, as it must, if our liberties are to be preserved, many good, easy souls who feel seated in power, will have to yield that power, which has been used in directing the people to carry out their edicts, prepared in caucus and proclaimed in convention. The cry of Abolitionism has been raised by the Anti-American party in the South, for no other purpose than to alarm their fears and strangle the American feeling.

Have not the two parties for years past charged each other with being identified with Abolitionists as it suited party interest? The American Order have given their platform to the world, perceive by the intelligence of the day that one of the oldest statesmen, the standard bearer of the party, General CASS, has approved the platform of the American Order, as proclaimed to the world by the Convention at Philadelphia.

From '50 to '54, Abolitionism appeared to do away. Its notes were seldom heard; or if heard, not heeded. The compromise of '50 had silenced agitation, and the last Congress, at its meeting, though composed of nearly three hundred members, claimed but four avowed Abolitionists in both Houses. Now they are formidable in number! What has produced this wonderful revolution? Was it not brought about under the present Democratic Administration, which came into power by a greater majority than any preceding one where there was a contest? Is it now powerful?

"What first broke it down and built up the Free-Soil and Abolition Party against it? Was it not the Nebraska bill? Does any one acquainted with the facts doubt it?"

Was not that measure concocted in a secret caucus of seven persons? It surely was. Indorsed by the President, and by his influence carried through Congress, in violation of the platform of both politicalparties, proclaimedat Baltimore. Had not the President given reiterated pledges that he would discourage the agitation of the Slavery question in and out of Congress, and elsewhere? Were those pledges redeemed by him? Was not this measure the first thing to renew the agitation since 1850? No candid man can suppose to the contrary.

It is regarded by moderate men at the North, good Democrats, who always stood by the South, as a breach of good faith, and they either opposed the Administration, or would not give it their support This measure gave audible expression of disapprobation by many who aided in electing the President; but there were other causes, and all united, gave rise to the American Order. The selection of the President's Cabinet, although it was highly unacceptable to the Democratic Party, they made an effort to swallow it. General discontent was growing up in the country. This feeling was aggravated by a report that an agreement was made between a Catholic Bishop and General PIERCE—conditional that General PIERCE was to receive the Catholic vote, and, in the event of his election, a situation in his Cabinet should be given to a member of the Catholic denomination. As this was published, and not denied, it was believed. Nor was this all. Foreigners were selected to fill important missions to foreign Governments, to the exclusion of distinguished American statesmen. About this time it was ascertained that an unusual number of convicts and paupers were thrown upon our shores from European prisons and poorhouses. The belief obtained that those classes of emigrants were thrust upon us by the policy of foreign Governments, who never can hear us good as long as we remain a free and independent people. These facts, in connection with general discontent towards the Administration, with threats made in the Catholic newspapers and periodicals, seemed at once to arouse the people, and admonish them to prepare for the contest. The cry was then raised by the Anti-Americans that the object of the American order was the proscription of Catholics and foreigners. This I deny! The threats and denunciations came from Catholic journals, which gave the alarm to Protestants and Americans. The design of the American order is not to put down Catholics, but to prevent Catholics from putting down Protestants. The members of the order would not nor do they intend to interfere with the Catholic religion, or their mode of worship; but, at the same time, we are not willing to place power in the hands of those who acknowledge or owe temporal allegiance to any foreign prince, king or potentate. Again, it is said the principles of the American Order proscribe foreigners, and are intended to extend the period of naturalization. I do not regard this principle as proscriptive. I understand foreigners are to be protected in the full enjoyment of all their civil rights, and of exercising whatever religious opinions or mode of worship they may prefer. No one wishes to abridge those privileges.

The possession and exercise of political rights are distinct matters. Females and minors possess and enjoy civil rights, yet they are not capable of exercising the political right of suffrage. That is a constitutional right, to those who are not natives it is a matter of grace and favor of Congress and of the Constitution. Congress has the power to invest foreigners with the right upon such conditions as may be thought proper and expedient for the well-being of the Republic.

The teachers of the modern School, who claim to be the only Democrats or patriots in the country, admit "that some modification of the naturalization laws might be well enough." They take care not to say how far they are willing to go. Are they willing to extend the period of probation to twenty-one years? If they are not, I am. If such laws were passed they could not affect those who are already naturalized, and who enjoy the full benefits of our institutions. Nor would it prejudice the claims of those who might have reached the American soil at the time of the passage, or going into operation of such laws. Such a measure, I should think ought to be hailed by naturalized foreigners and those whose claims to naturalization have commenced with as much joy as if they were native Americans. If not on their own account, they should at least hail it on account of their children. The foreigners who have been naturalized in our country are generally of a class who would feel it a poor compliment paid them to place convicts and paupers on a footing of equality with them; or to say that such beings were entitled to the considerations which are due the naturalized citizen.

I am in favor of excluding from our shores persons who cannot come to the country with a certificate from our consular agents in the country which they leave, representing them as persons of good character; if they have been guilty of political offences in their country, to state the same, that a proper allowance might be made by our Government. I am becoming suspicious of the teachers in these days of UTILITARIAN politics. And before I enlist under the leaders of modern Democracy, I wish to know of them whether they stand on the JACKSON or CALHOUN platform. Between their platforms there was an essential difference. JACKSON'S was the Constitution and the Union. This is the platform upon which I stand, and if, as has been asserted, the American Party is down, the battle over, and victory won, I shall only feel mortified to witness at my period of life, after having looked upon so many vicissitudes of my country, to see an Anti-American feeling triumph. One consolation, at least, will be left me. Whilst the triumphs of American principles were reverberating throughout the Union, I was silent. When those principles are said to be in eclipse I come forward with cheerfulness and declare that I believe the salvation of my country is only to be secured by adherence to the principles of the American Order.

A triumph is claimed by Anti-Americans, based on the suppositions that all counsels will be broken up, from the fact that some withdrawals have and may continue to take place. In all cases within my knowledge where withdrawals have occurred, a greater number were added to the order than seceders. Occasionally, men have joined the order from motives which did little credit to its principles, and remained members for months. Their motives can only be inferred from their actions. They remained quietly until nominations were made, in which they were not so fortunate as they much desired to be. Those persons soon after withdrew from the order, denouncing it as an "UNHOLY, DARK LANTERN SOCIETY."

In many cases, seceders have regarded themselves as highly qualified teachers of the newfangled politics in Texas. But not of the good old Jefferson and Jackson Democracy. The present is a momentous epoch in the annals of our country.

A vast responsibility devolves upon us. We are acting in the present, it is true, but we are also acting or all future generations. We are accountable to our posterity. We have received a heritage from our fathers. Shall we regard it with care, and transmit it unimpaired to our children? Shall we remain American? Shall we remain national? Or shall we surrender ourselves to demagogues and party leaders? Or shall we sell our birthright for a mess of potage?

We have a high and holy duty to perform to our country, and if we, as Americans, cannot maintain and preserve our freedom, is it possible, or even probable, that we will find a safer depository in the hands of foreigners, or the satellites of a Pope? whose system of religion pursues all American Protestants with denunciations while living, and denies their bodies burial after death, in Catholic countries. Is it a crime, or even fault in Americans who seek to resist an influence so adverse to principles of free government? Is it proscription to fortify ourselves against all encroachments upon religious or political freedom? If it is wrong, then I am wrong. If it is right, then I will maintain the right.

Your friend and fellow-citizen.

SAM HOUSTON.

POLITICAL ITEMS.

The Philadelphia Press (Douglas) enlarges upon Senator DOUGLAS' recent letter in regard to the Presidency. It says:

"Judge DOUGLAS proposes no act of disorganization to the Democratic Party. He plants himself upon the recognized and accepted principles of that party, and, although he abstained from saying the word, the whole tenor of his communication is to the effect that when the doctrines of a great political party are rejected and betrayed, it is idle to plead in its behalf the skeleton of a mere organization. This declaration of principle on the part of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS should go forth among the Democracy as an olive-branch of harmony. To us of the Free States it offers victory in every Representative, Senatorial and Congressional District. To the South it proposes no injustice, for the double reason that he who offers it has been the life-long champion of Southern rights, and because the principle itself has been indorsed and approved by every conservative Southern statesman, beginning with HENRY CLAY, of Kentucky, and ending with ROBERT M. T. HUNTER, of Virginia. If the Charlestown Convention is not the mere echo of custom-houses, post-offices, navy-yards, United States marshals, and Cabinet Ministers, it will rejoice in the opportunity presented by the proposition of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS to consolidate the Democratic Party upon a platform which will be the gospel of our political salvation for generations to come. Judge DOUGLAS, if we know the man, does not ask as a "condition precedent" that he should be the candidate. All that he desires is that the pledges and principles of the Democratic Party should be religiously observed. This done, the selection of a standard-bearer will be a secondary consideration."

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia North American says of the Douglas letter:

"In defining his position against the revival of the Slave-Trade, a Congressional slave case for the Territories and so-called popular sovereignty, Mr. DOUGLAS has taken a step which will certainly attract strength to him. And if he had been equally fortunate in selecting the time for his demonstration, as he has been politic in other respects, his aspirations would have been still further advanced. As it is, the opposition of all the rival interests will now be concentrated against him, as the chief obstacle to individual success, and he will be met at Charleston with an organized combination, like that which Lord DERBY'S ministry recently encountered, bent upon defeating him, no matter what may happen afterwards. This is no time, if indeed there ever is one, for Presidential letter writing. Politicians would find very useful instruction in one of TALLEYRAND'S well-known maxims, and patriotic gentlemen who have candidates in training, can render them no better service now than to put padlocks on their mouths, and irons on their hands, or establish a "lock-up" for a year to come. The only trouble about the last suggestion would be in providing accommodation for the number of victims who might be thus temporarily restrained of their personal liberty."

Mr. BENJ. F. HALL, the new editor of the Auburn Union, (late the American,) is sustaining a sharp warfare with the Auburn Advertiser. Mr. HALL says he is endeavoring "to cement and harmonize the union of Americans and Republicans in this State." The Advertiser says he is a hypocrite. Mr. HALL replies to this charge:

"The editor knows that it was never our habit to abuse any body bitterly. We have been, as he well knows, a Republican in sentiment and feeling ever since that party was organized, and as such when our party was contesting elections with Americans, we were opposed to them. To obviate the necessity of any further contests of this sort, however, we are in favor of union now. This is our hypocrisy."

The Chicago Herald (Administration) is exceedingly joyful over the current rumor that the DOUGLAS organ (the Times) in Chicago, is about to change hands. It is said that the present editor is to retire, and that the paper will be placed upon a new footing. The Herald says it is "a change devoutly to be wished;" and comments upon the past course of the Times in a way which bears little appearance of "reconciliation and harmony." The Herald says:

"It is notoriously true that the course pursued by the TIMES for a year past has been such as to injure and disgrace the party to which it has professed to belong, and that, as at present conducted, its only influence is for evil, and that continually. Like Ishmael of old, its hand is against every man, and every man's hand is against it. It is believed that the TIMES is now the chief, if not the only obstacle in the way, to prevent the union of the party in this State. Having caused the difficulties heretofore existing, more by its offensive manner than by the principles which it has labored to inculcate, it seems now to take a sort of fiendish pride in gloating over the mischief it has wrought."

There is a project on foot in Kansas to include in the State of Kansas so much of the Territory of Nebraska as lies south of the Platte River. The Lawrence Republican, alluding to this scheme, regards its accomplishment as impossible. The Republican says:

"We believe a portion of the people inhabiting that section of Nebraska have elected delegates who will seek admission to the Wyandot Constitutional Convention. We cannot learn that this project originated with the people, either of Nebraska or Kansas, but it seems rather to be the work of certain political wire-workers, who have their own ends to subserve thereby. Indeed, there is a strong feeling of opposition to the proposed measure among the people of Nebraska, south of the Platte. Several of the strongest journals there express themselves decidedly against it. Among our own people the subject has hardly been agitated—from the fact that there has been no expectation that the matter would be seriously pressed."

The Hon. GEORGE W. JONES, of Tennessee, has come to the defence of the Administration, in the matter of the charges of extravagance. A long letter, addressed to the Democratic State Central Committee, appears in the Memphis Avalanche. Mr. JONES admits the correctness of the figures, which show a present annual expenditure of eighty millions; but endeavors to shield the Administration by shifting the responsibility to the shoulders of the Opposition. He says:

"I believe the fact may be confidently assumed, without fear of contradiction by the record, that in a very large majority of the cases and acts of Congress which have so materially increased the expenditures of the General Government since the expiration of Mr. POLK'S administration, in March, 1849, they have been supported by a majority of the Opposition in Congress. In nine cases out of ten, in which the yeas and nays were called, I doubt not, the majority of the Opposition will be found to have recorded their votes in the affirmative."

The inharmonious Democracy of North Carolina have received a brisk rebuff from the Hon. T. D MCDOWELL, of Elizabethtown, who was nominated for Congress by a Convention held in Columbus County, but declined to run on the ground that the action of the nominating Convention tended to disorganize the party. It appears that Mr. MCDOWELL was nominated by the citizens of a single county; no delegates having been present from the other counties comprised within the Congressional District. Mr. MCDOWELL rebukes the Democracy for this schism, and adds:

"However much I might feel flattered by being selected as the representative of the district, I could never consent to be thus honored at the risk of jeopardizing the success of the Democratic Party. I esteem its success too important to allow personal considerations to influence me when there is danger of its defeat. Under these circumstances, I must decline most respectfully to become a candidate."

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press writes:

"Orders have been issued to the different Administration papers throughout the country that the work of excommunication against Judge DOUGLAS and all his friends must be at once renewed. You have seen the articles in the Constitution and the Star, of to-day. This key-note will be taken up by all the other papers that live upon the patronage of the Administration. This is well, and shows how consistently the men in office here maintain the decision of principle which began in the Autumn of 1857."

THE PIKE'S PEAK GOLD.

Flattering Accounts from the Mines—Statement from Mr. Horace Greeley and others—A Caution.

From the Chicago Press and Tribune.

We have received copies of the Leavenworth Times of the 21st, and the Rocky Mountain News extra of the 11th inst. From the Times we learn that the Pike's Peak Express reached Leavenworth on the 20th, in eight days from Denver City, bringing $2,500 in dust on consignment. New discoveries had been made at Jackson diggings, which it was thought would equal the Gregory diggings in richness. Messrs. SMOOT & RUSSELL, of Leavenworth, had received $500 in dust from the new placer. HORACE GREELEY had arrived at Denver City in six days and twenty-three hours from the Missouri River. He immediately started for the Gregory diggings, in company with A. D. RICHARDSON, a well-known citizen of Kansas, formerly of the Boston Journal, and a Mr. HENRY VILLARD. After fifteen miles travel they came upon the banks of Clear Creek, where they found several hundred wagons and tents belonging to the miners in the mountains. From this point to the diggings—a distance of some twenty miles—the journey was accomplished on mules over precipitous hills and ravines covered with heavy quartz and granite boulders. After a tour of inspection through the various mines, the three explorers prepared the subjoined statement for publication in the Rocky Mountain News.

On the evening of the 8th, Mr. GREELEY addressed an assemblage of some four thousand

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.
Before Justices Roosevelt, Davies and Sutherland.

THE STEPHENS CASE.

The People vs. Jas. Stephens—Mr. Waterbury the District Attorney, said he had an order to show cause this morning in relation to the error book in this case prepared for the Court of Appeals. He said he had never heard Mr. Ashmead make objection to the record that it did not show that the prisoner was present the whole trial, and he moved to strike this out.

Mr. Ashmead replied briefly, reading from the points he had served, showing that this was his tenth point, and also read a part of Justice Lott's opinion, deciding this very question. It appeared that the District Attorney was not present during the argument, so that he did not hear it.

The Court finally ordered that a certificate should be given by Justice ROOSEVELT to the effect that the prisoner was present at and after the rendition of the verdict.

Mr. Ashmead desired his exception to be noted in the certificate, which was done.

The Court then adjourned until July 5, at 11 A. M.

SPECIAL TERM.
Before Justice Roosevelt.

DIVISION IN THE POLICE CASES—THE RETURN OF THE COMMISSIONERS IN PART QUASHED, IN PART SUSTAINED.

The People, on the relation of Thomas Beatty vs. The Board of Police.—This was one of 600 cases brough by the Old Police to obtain restoration to their office by means of mandamus. The case came up on a motion to quash the return made to the writ of mandamus by the Commissioners. The opinion, as follows, of the Court was rendered by

ROOSEVELT, J.—Beaty, who is the relator or plaintiff in this case, alleges, among other things, that in 1857 he was a member of the Old Police force of the City of New York; that he had been "duly appointed and sworn; that he was never "legally discharged or dismissed," but was unjustly and unlawfully "removed" by the new Board of Commissioners created in 1857, without any "written charges" against him or any opportunity of defence, and that the Commissioners, therefore, unless good cause be shown by them to the contrary, ought to be compelled to restore him and "to permit him to take the profits and salary of the office."

Such is the complaint and the prayer contained in the alternative mandamus, to which the Ponce Board were called upon to respond.

Before considering the answer or "return" made by the Commissioners, it will be necessary to advert for a moment to the new Police law, passed April 15, 1857, upon the true interpretation of which the present controversy—like the numerous others which preceded or accompanied—depends for its solution.

The main provision is contained in section thirty-two, declaring that the Police—meaning the Old Police—in the Cities of New York and Brooklyn (until after the first meeting of the new Board) should continue to do duty under the previously existing laws, and that from the time of such meeting they "shall hold office and do duty under the provisions of the act hereby enacted, and as members of the police force of the Metropolitan Police District hereby constituted."

No new oath of office or other formal acceptance of the new duties is required. They were policemen before, and with the name of patrolmen—a merely fanciful change—they were to be policemen still. They were, under existing laws, policemen for the City of New-York; under the new act they were to be policemen for the City and, nominally, for surrounding territory, although practically and almost exclusively for the City. Their executive head, in stead of a "Chief," was to be a "General," their Captains were to be "Inspectors or Captains," and their Lieutenants were to be "Sergeants." But all the leading powers, and duties, and organization, were substantially the same. In other words the new system, so called, was a modification, and not a repeal, of the old; and the "persons filling the offices," as the act expresses, "under the old system were compelled, under their new name, to discharge, as before, the duties of police."

It will thus be seen that it was not necessary for the complainant to aver that he had been "duly appointed," but only to allege, as he does, that he was in fact a "patrolman and one of the Police," or, as he might have expressed it, using the language of the Legislature in the same section, "a person filling the office" at the date of the new law. That fact being established, the act itself, as we have seen, declares that his function shall "continue," and that he "shall hold office and do duty" as a member of the Police Force thereby constituted—subject, of couse, as the text section [declares, to removal in the manner prescribed should he not possess, or, rather, should he on trial, after due notice, be found not to possess, the required qualifications. And the same section also shows that it was no more necessary for the complainant (I use the term as more convenient than relator) to aver in the first instance that he had been "illegally removed" than it was that he had been filling the office, and that he had been ejected—the legality of the one and the illegality of the other, until controverted, are to be presumed. The thirty-third "legally appointed." It was enough to say that he was section declares that any member of the old Police not possessed of the prescribed qualifications shall be removed; which implies that no member on that ground shall be treated as out until put out by the Board; and he must be put out, says the act, in the manner proscribed. "No person shall be removed except upon written charges preferred against him by the Board of Police, and after an opportunity shall have been afforded him of being heard in his defence."

It would seem, from these considerations, to follow that several of the allegations in the writ or complaint are surplusage. If the Commissioners intended to dispute the legality of the complainant's original appointment, it was for them to point out the alleged defect, and to set it up by way of affirmative defence on their part. So, also, if they intended to rely on any supposed disqualification, they should have averred in like manner a removal on written charges and due notice, giving the particulars, sufficiently at least, to show jurisdiction. For the old Policemen it was enough to aver that they were actually filling the office at the date of the new law, and that the new law, by its terms, without any new oath, continued them in office; whereas the new Commissioners, by their acts, without removing them, had treated them as if they were out of office, by refusing to pay the salaries to which by law they were entitled. All the rest was matter of defence, to be averred and proved by the Board.

With this preliminary statement I shall now proceed to examine the answer or return of the Commissioners, which the complainant's counsel, on various grounds assigned by them, have asked the Court to quash or set aside.

First—The alleges first, that on and prior to the 15th day of April, 1857, the relator, though acting and claiming to act as a member of the Police force under the act in relation to the Police Department in the City and County of New-York, passed April 13, 1853, had not received and did not possess any valid appointment or lawful warrant or authority as such member, and had not been duly commissioned or appointed as such member under the said act.

Second—That the relator refused to take or hold office, and never has taken or held office under the act of April, 1857, or under the Board of Police thereby established.

Third—That upon the first meeting of the Board of Police, under the act of 1857, to wit: on the 23d day of April, 1857, the relator withdrew from the Police force established under the said act, and disclaimed holding any office or doing any duty as a member of the Police force of the Metropolitan Police District, thereby constituted.

Fourth—That on the 2d day of June, 1857, an ordinance was passed by the Common Council of the City of New-York, and approved by the Mayor, of which a copy is annexed; and the relator took office, and acted under the ordinance until the 3d day of July 1857.

Fifth—That from the passage of the act of 1857 until and after the 3d day of July, 1857, the relator neglected and refused to perform any of the duties of a member of the Police force of a Metropolitan Police District.

Sixth—That from the passage of the act of 1857 until and after the 3d of July, 1857, the relator neglected and refused to obey any of the orders of the Board of Police, or to perform any duty under them.

Seventh—That from the passage of the said act of 1857, until, and after the 3d day of July, 1857, the relator, by force and violence, opposed the said Board of Police, and the Police force under their command, in the lawful discharge of their duties and against the peace of the people of the State of New-York.

Eighth—That after the said 23d day of April, 1857, to wit, on or about the day of June, 1857, the said Board duly appointed a suitable and duly qualified person to fill the office and perform the duties of a member of the Police force of the Metropolitan Police District, in the place and stead of the relator, and the person so appointed, thereupon took the office and has hitherto held, and still holds the same; and has received, and is still receiving, the pay and emoluments thereof.

Ninth—That the Police force of the Metropolitan Police District was, at the time of suing out said writ of mandamus, and now is, full, and there has been and is no vacancy or office to which the relator could or can be admitted or appointed.

Tenth—That the name of the relator was not on the pay-rolls of the Police force of the Metropolitan Police District on the nineteenth day of April, 1859, and has not been on such pay-rolls at any time since, and there is no money now in the hands or under the control of the Board, or of its Treasurer, and no fund raised or provided by law, which can be applied to the payment of the relator, or otherwise applied than to the payment of the persons whose names were on such pay-rolls on the nineteenth day of April, 1859, or who might thereafter be appointed.

Eleventh—That since the passage of the act of 1857 the relator, has for his private gain and profit, entered into other employments in no wise connected with, but inconsistent with his duties as a member of said Police force, and has received large profits therefor.

Twelfth—That written charges having been duly preferred to the Board, against the relator for disobedience of orders, and other misconduct, of which charges he received due notice, and against which he had an opportunity to defend himself; a trial before the Board was thereupon had after due notice to the relator, and an opportunity afforded to him to be heard in his defense; and thereupon and on or about the day of 1857, an order was made by the Board, in due form and course of law, that the relator be dismissed and removed from the Police force of the Metropolitan Police District.

This return, as will readily be seen, admits by implication that Beatty was a policeman de facto. He was, therefore, "continued" in office by force of the new law. Whether duly appointed by the old Board would seem to be a matter of no consequence. He was recognized by it and paid as a policeman; which is the whole meaning of the terms "the Police in the City of New-York, officers and patrolmen shall continue to do duty." "The Police in the City" is an expression synonymous with that of "persons filling the office of policemen;" And filling an office means, whether de jure or not, filling the office de facto—that is, acting and being recognized and being paid, without objection, as such by those who are not to be acted upon and by those who have the power to control.

If this view be correct, the first plea or branch of the return renders an immaterial issue.

As to the 2d, 3d and 4th pleas, they amount in substance to one and the same thing—they allege a withdrawal from, and an unequivocal refusal to act under, the police establishment as newly organized; in other words, that although for an instant continued in by the will of the Legislature, the complainant went out immediately, as he had a right to do, by his own will.

This plea, when tested by evidence, will probably be found to rest upon some verbal nicety; still, on its face I see no ground for striking it out. If Beatty, on the passage of the obnoxious law—obnoxious to him—saw fit by any sufficiently significant and unequivocal act to resign the office in which the Legislature proposed to continue him, it was clearly competent to him to do so. It will hardly be contended, under our free institutions, that the Legislature can compel a man to be a policeman against his consent, or at least that any such legislative intention shall be presumed, unless most unequivocally expressed. And if the complainant regularly resigned, (a very improbable supposition) he of course cannot be restored by mandamus—he must, in that case, be reappointed by the Commissioners, and not by the Court. The Judiciary, it is needless to say, (whether by mandamus or otherwise,) have no appointing power.

The 5th, 6th and 7th pleas are mere surplusage. Neglect, disobedience, resistance, as substantive matters, are grounds for removal. If proved on written charges and due notice, they would warrant a sentence by the Commissioners. But till then the officer would not be out of office. As mere matters of evidence, although not conclusive, they may tend to show a refusal, resignation or withdrawal, and in that way support the three previous pleas; but mere evidence needs not to be and should not be pleaded. It has a tendency, besides, when so introduced, to confuse a case, and should, for that reason, be stricken out.

As to the eighth and ninth pleas, they are substantially one, to wit: that another person has been duly appointed and actually fills the relator's place.

If the relator regularly resigned or was dismissed, (two issues already made,) this averment, as we have seen, would be immaterial. If he did not resign and was not removed, then his place was not vacant, and no other could be appointed in his stead. Two bodies, whether in political or natural philosophy, cannot occupy the same space at the same time. Besides, how could another person have been appointed "in the place and stead" of the relator, if the relator at the time had no stead or place which he himself did or could occupy?

These pleas, however, proceed upon the assumption that where an officer has been unlawfully turned out by the commission, he cannot be restored on mandamus by the Court, if another, although unlawfully, has been put, or, rather, has been attempted to be put, in his place. In unitary offices, to be filled by a single individual, such, for instance, as the City Inspector, that may be the rule. A quo warranto, directed to the incumbent himself, would seem in such a case to be the appropriate remedy. But the word police is a noun of multitude. It implies in this City more than a thousand men. Against which one, which in particular, of this quasi army, is the writ of quo warranto, if issued, to be directed? And which one in particular of this numerous force can be said "to hold in the place and stead of Thomas Beaty?" When the force became full, up to the highest number allowed by law, including the members of the Old Police, who were continued by operation of the statute, all subsequent appointments, unless preceded by corresponding resignations or removals, were, of course, unauthorized and void. Such, at least, would seem to be the necessary legal conclusion. An appointment, therefore, of that character, in favor of a third person being a nullity, would be no answer to a mandamus in favor of the rightful claimant. If neither filled Beaty's place nor the place of any other legally "continued" policeman, Beatty remained still in, although not recognized by his superiors. And if the place was "full," it was full of Beatty, and of Beatty alone. So that the mandamus applied for, although in terms to restore him to the office," was really to restore him only to recognition and pay. What disposition, in that view of the matter, shall be made of the supernumeraries, it will be for the Commissioners and the Legislature to determine.

As to the tenth and eleventh pleas, it is sufficient answer to the objection raised that no arrears of pay are at present asked. When future installments, if ever, become due to the relator, and he demands them of the Treasurer of the Board, it will be time enough for them to plead that they have no funds, and that the Legislature have made no appropriation, or that a discount should be taken from the legal pay to the extent of the emoluments received from another source. So far as entering into other employments is urged for any other purpose, it is mere evidence tending, unexplained, to make out a case of resignation, and as evidence is unnecessary and inadmissible in a pleading.

To the twelfth plea, if true, there can be no legal objection. An officer de facto as well as an officer de jure may be tried, and on conviction removed. Removal does not imply that the officer was lawfully in, or even, necessarily, that he was actually in. The Commissioners, acting as they are presumed to do, "on behalf of the public," might, to obviate all doubt, remove, I conceive, in a merely colorable case, without committing the public to any implied admission that the person removed had been in. [See Judge STRONG's opinion in the McCune case.] There is no inconsistency, therefore, in this plea. It is a legitimate plea also within the decision in McCune's case. Indeed, Mr. Justice STRONG, in that case, decided that "it would undoubtedly be sufficient objection to the writ if (meaning without any actual removal by sentence) it appeared clearly that there had been sufficient cause for the removal of the relator." The Court would not be guilty of the folly of commanding the Board to put the relator into office if, beyond dispute, on the facts existing, he must necessarily and properly be turned out of it the next minute, or, at least, as soon as heard.

In the present plea the defendants not only set forth, if true, a clear cause for removal, but removal itself after a regular trial. They allege that written charges were duly preferred of disobedience of superiors, that due notice was given and that a due order of dismissal after trial, was entered; and although the probabilities may be that the notice given, in point of fact or law, was not sufficient and that the order on that ground, as decided in Gorman's case, was a nullity, yet for the purposes of the present motion and until a regular trial can be had, the law requires me to assume the truth of the averment that due notice was given, there being, as yet, no allegation or proof of its falsity. At the same time, without expressing any opinion on the fact, I may be permitted to say that nothing is to be ultimately gained on either side by the litigation of a fictitious case or by interlocutory triumphs on mere questions of form. In the language of the printed points submitted by defendants' counsel, "This is a controversy which ought not to be made dependent for its determination upon any technical considerations whatever." It is sufficiently embarrassed by intrinsic difficulties and by what I conceive to be contradictory decisions, without superadding mere questions of form. I say contradictory decisions, because, in the first case discussed in the Court of Appeals, and in which the constitutionality of the New Police Act was settled, (15 New York Reports, 532) it was held by a majority of the Judges that the Police contemplated by that act, even as to the Old Police Force, was a creation of new offices, and came within the provision declaring that "All officers whose offices may be hereafter created by law, (that is, after 1846) shall be elected by the people or appointed as the Legislature may direct." In other words, by the State, instead of the local authorities—whether Legislative or Executive—and that as to the Old Police Force, the act was at one and the same time a "direction" that they should be appointed to the newly-created office of "patrolmen" by the Senate and Assembly, and a fulfillment of that direction by a simultaneous appointment, as directed, in gross of the whole of the Old Force, under the general description of "the Police in the City of New York" then doing duty, instead of a special designation of each individual man by name. Whereas by the subsequent decision, made two years afterward in the McCune case by another majority of the same tribunal—four of the former Judges having in the interim gone out and four others been "selected" in their place—it was held that the office of patrolmen under the new act, so far as the Old Force was concerned, was not a new office, and did not require a new appointment or a new oath or acceptance; in other words, to use the language of one of the majority, it was "in terms a mere continuance in office," in an office existing before the adoption of the Constitution, and not newly created by subsequent enactment. "The officers designated were to continue to do the same duties as before, and to hold, in effect, the same office, but under a different title." Now, as the Legislature had no power to alter the mode of appointment to an existing office, the principles of the second decision, if applied to the facts involved in the first, must, it will be seen, necessarily have resulted in a determination adverse, instead of favorable, to the constitutionality of the new law. We have thus two adjudications for our guidance, of equal authority, giving, on the point involved, directly opposite interpretations to the statute whose provisions we are to apply. According to the one, the office of patrolmen under the new act, "being a newly-created office, and other than a county, town, city or village office," (Judge Denio at page 556,) it would only be necessary, in answer to the writ of mandamus to show which could be done by very slight circumstances, an omission or non acceptance of the tendered appointment. According to the other, being an old office in which the incumbent was continued "with substantially the same duties," under "a mere change of name," (Justice Strong,) "no personal acceptance was necessary," and consequently to deprive the incumbent of his existing rights and emoluments, either an unequivocal resignation by positive act with that intent must be shown, or a judicial sentence of removal after a regular trial and conviction according to law. In the case of McCune, the attempt was made to do both; and in both respects the attempt failed of success. The alleged removal of "James McCune," turned out to be a sentence pronounced by the Commissioners against "James M. Line;" and thus, as Judge Strong expresses it, with "no judgment against him he had been actually ejected from office." And as to the alleged resignation, the Commissioners, instead of showing any acts or expressions of McCune with that intent, proved the most unequivocal determination on his part (evinced as well by acts as words) to hold on to the old office, although under the advice of his old superiors, he declined, like many others, to recognize its newly appointed, and very nearly, as the opinions show, unconstitutionally appointed chiefs.

With these views of the difficulties of the whole subject I deem it not out of place to suggest, as I have already done on former occasions, that instead of six hundred actions or quasi actions, with all their forms and technicalities, "the parties to the questions in difference," as the Code expressly and wisely permits, should "agree upon a case containing the facts upon which the controversy depends and present a submission of the same in Court, to be heard and determined at a General Term, and judgment rendered thereon as if an action were depending."

Should this suggestion not be adopted an order will be entered, in the single proceeding now under review, quashing the return to the writ of mandamus, so far as it conflicts with the views above expressed, with liberty to the defendants to amend in five days after notice, and to the plaintiffs to reply or demur in five days thereafter.

After the Court had finished reading this opinion, Mr. McKEON said the course thus advised was the one he had wished to carry out, and he hoped the other side would consent.

Mr. EVARTS, of counsel for the Board of Police, said he presumed the order of the Court would be that certain specified parts of the return should stand, and that, as to the others, the relators should demur and their demurrer be allowed, as in demurrer ore tenus.

The Court assented, but Mr. McKEON objected, saying he did not mean to demur, and could not be made to.

Justice ROOSEVELT said it seemed to him that it would be proper for the Commissioners to pass a resolution declaring that none of these men should be considered as resigning office by taking any other employment, subject to a corresponding deduction from their pay if necessary. In his opinion, the Legislature would have to intervene as well as the Courts, before these men could get the money.

Mr. Beebe thought it would be easily accomplished without this.

Some further desultory discussion ensued, and the Court suggested to the great crowd of interested auditors that all these questions were merely legal, and involved no decisive issue, and it was very desirable in this warm weather that there should not be such a throng in the court-room.

By leave of the Court Ex-Judge Beebe addressed the audience, and requested his 574 clients to conform to the above advice.

Mr. M'KEON desired to bring forward his case, but the Court would not sit. Mr. M'KEON said he wished to make the Commissioners feel their responsibility, and that he should not concede any of his rights as counsel to costs or otherwise. Mr. EVARTS said they would take due note.

The Court then adjourned, being understood that counsel would settle the form of the order.

CIRCUIT.
Before Judge Gould.

SUIT TO RECOVER FOR PROVISIONS SOLD AND DELIVERED.

Nathaniel Smith vs. Francis H. West et al.—This was an action against the defendants as exporters of provisions to the West Indies, to collect $3,017 93, alleged to be due the plaintiffs for provisions, wares and merchandise sold to defendants in July, 1857, and thereafter.

The complaint sets forth that goods, provisions, &c., to that amount were sold to the defendants and actually shipped to the West Indies.

The answer puts in a general denial of the purchase alleged in the complaint. The case is still on.

SUPERIOR COURT—CHAMBERS.

THE CITY CAN EMPLOY OTHER LAWYERS THAN MR. BUSTEED.

The Mayor vs. The Exchange Fire Insurance Company.—In this matter the defendant's motion to dismiss the complaint, on the ground that Mann & Rodman, Esqs., were not legally authorized to prosecute for the plaintiff, was denied instead of being granted by Judge HOFFMAN on Saturday, as was erroneously reported.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.
Before Judges Daly, Hilton and Brady.

James R. Place and Ephraim B. Place vs. Wm. S. McIlvain and Isaac D. Young.—This was an appeal to the General Term from a judgment given to the defendants, at Trial Term, as indorsers of a certain promissory note, made in February, 1857, for the sum of $486 16 on the ground that the plaintiffs, who afterwards became the holders of the note upon its maturity, extended the time of payment on the application of the maker without their consent; and such an extension of payment, it is claimed, operated as a release of the defendants as indorsers, discharging them from further responsibility on the note. The case was tried by the Court without a jury in May, 1858, and resulted in a judgment for the plaintiffs for the amount claimed.

All the facts were conceded by the counsel on the trial. On the appeal, the plaintiff offered to stipulate to allow an order to be entered granting a new trial, with costs to abide event. The appellants claimed that, as all the facts were conceded, the Court should render a final judgment. This, however, they held they had no power to do, and a new trial was ordered.

Mr. Abbott for appellants; Mr. Wallis for respondents.

SPECIAL TERM.
Before Judge Daly.

Jose de Silva Maia Ferreira vs. William Depew.—The facts in this case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the Court rendered by DALY J. The defendant applies for an order discontinuing this suit, and produces a release of all claim and demand against the defendant in this action, executed by the wife of the plaintiff, by virtue of a power of attorney from her husband who is now in Portugal. The application is resisted by Louis De La Figaniere upon the ground that the plaintiff was formerly a member of the firm of Figaniere, Reis & Co.; that whilene was a member of that firm he gave C. H. S. Figaniere, one of the firm, a power of attorney, to transact all his business in the City of New York, of whatsoever name, nature or description the same might be, whether relating to him as a member of the firm of Figaniere, Reis & Co., or in his individual capacity, and that the firm of Figaniere, Reis & Co. failed, and made a general assignment of the property of the firm and of the individual property of each member, for the benefit of creditors to Louis Figaniere. The assignment was executed by each of the partners, three of them executing it in person, and C. H. L. De La Figaniere, in virtue of the above power, executing it in behalf of the plaintiff, who was then in Portugal. After the assignment, Louis De La Figaniere gave notice of the assignment of the claim in this action to him, which notice was given before the execution of the release, and he claims that the suit is now prosecuted for him, as assignee, for the benefit of creditors. The suit is for a claim belonging to the plaintiff individually.

If the power given to C. H. S. De La Figaniere was sufficient to entitle him to bind the plaintiff by a general assignment of the property of the firm for the benefit of the creditors, which I very much doubt, it cannot in my judgment be extended so far as to entitle him to assign all the individual property of the plaintiff to a trustee for the payment of his debts. A power of Attorney always receiving a strict interpretation, and it would be giving to the authority conferred upon H. C. S. Figaniere to transact all the plaintiff's business in the City of New-York, of whatsoever name, nature or description; a very extensive signification to hold that it conferred upon the Attorney the right to transfer all the plaintiff's property to a trustee for the payment of his debts; and the words do not in my opinion create a power so extensive. At wood vs. Manning 7, B. and C. 278. Hogg vs. Smith, 1 Taunt 347. Paley on Agency, 192.

The power given by the plaintiff to his wife is very loosely expressed. It simply appoints her his attorney, with the general clause giving her full power and authority to do whatever he might do "in the premises," ratifying and confirming all that she can fully do by virtue of the power. I think, however, that it is sufficient to authorize her to act on an action. It is as general as it can possibly be, and unless it is to have no effect at all, and confers no power of any kind, which I am not prepared to hold, it would authorize such an act as she has done.

The motion must be granted.

Before Judge Brady.

Baker vs. The Mayor, &c.—This was an application by the Board of Supervisors to set aside a judgment obtained against the City, on the ground that the suit should have been brought against the County. The following is the opinion of the Judge denying the motion:

BRADY, J.—The articles to recover for which this action was brought were furnished by the plaintiff under and by virtue of the act of Legislature entitled "An act to provide for a more certain canvass of votes at each election in the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn," passed April 7, 1857, (Session Laws, vol. 1, p. 596,) as appears by the certificate of the County Clerk. The fourth section of that act makes it the duty of the Clerk of the County to provide each election poll in the cities of New-York and Brooklyn with proper blank stationary, sealing-wax and light, at the expense of the county, and thus the charge for the articles to be provided is made a county charge. It is the duty of the Supervisors to examine, settle, and allow all accounts chargeable against the County (1s. R. S. 366 p. 4. The People vs. Edmond, 15 Barb. 259 Brady vs. Supervisors, 2 Sand. 460. People vs. Supervisors of Dutchess Co, 9 Wend. 508) and this power implies an exercise of judgment and discretion, and involves the right to reject for sufficient reasons, the items for which payment is demanded. (See Cases supra, but their powers are specific and limited in their character, see titles 2 and 4 of chap. 12, Part I. R. S., vol. 365, 385, and can it be transcended? Chemung Canal Bank vs. Supervisors of Chemung, 5 Denio, 517; People vs. Lawrence, 6 Hill 244; Hill vs. Board of Supervisors of Livingston County, 2 Kernan, 52.) They related to the County, the powers of which as a body politic, can only be exercised by the Board of Supervisors, or in pursuance of a resolution adopted by them (1 R. S. 264, ch. 12 supra). Two separate and distinct organizations exist in this County for the purpose of civil government, embracing the same territory, and each embracing its appropriate functions. The powers conferred upon the City Government are found in several charters granted by the Crown and confirmed by the People of this State in their several Conventions, and by various acts of the Legislature amending the Charters. The powers of the Supervisors are to be found in the Revised Statutes of this State, and the several acts of the Legislature conferring specific powers upon them. (per Davies, J., in the People vs. Stout, 23 Barb. 338, 241.) Prior to the act of 1857, (Sess Laws, vol. 2, 285.) creating the existing Board of Supervisors, the Aldermen, together with the Mayor and Recorder, constituted the Board of Supervisors, all of which, except the Recorder, were officers of the City Government. But the present organization was not gifted with greater powers These organizations being distinct and independent of each other, it follows that even if the defendants assumed without authority the payment of a debt, the Board of Supervisors, as such, cannot control them; and it is equally clear that if the defendants suffer a judgment to be obtained against them upon a claim for which they are not liable, the Board of Supervisors, as such, cannot interfere to prevent them from paying it, or ask its review or disturbance. The Legislature have in effect so declared by the act passed April 19, 1857, (Sess. laws, 1859, p. 1,123) entitled, "An act to enable the Supervisors of the City and County of New-York to raise money by tax," and in which provision was made for the payment of the judgment in this and other cases, in providing (sec. 5) that whenever the Comptroller should have reason to believe that any judgment then on record against the defendants was obtained by collusion and founded in fraud, he should be authorized and required to take proper and necessary means to open and reverse the same, and to use the name of the defendants, and to employ counsel for that purpose.

The application contemplated by the section referred to, being made by persons who have no authority, therefore the motion must be denied. Ordered accordingly.

Before Judge Daly.

Chapman et al. vs. Duffy.—Motion to discharge from arrest denied.

Matter of Alexander Francis.—Warrant of arrest and all proceedings under it discharged.

Ferrera vs. Depew.—Motion granted.

Speth vs. Fink.—Judgment for defendant.

Tucker vs. Williams. The Mayor et al. vs. Britt & Pettigrew.—Judgments for plaintiffs.

SURROGATE'S COURT.

WILL OF DAVID NICHOLS, DECEASED.

This will was admitted to probate on the 5th day of April, 1858. The testator disposed of about $200,000 by this will, making a liberal provision for his widow, Caroline B. Nichols, and giving certain legacies to his brother and sisters. He appointed Lewis B. Brown as the executor of his will. On the 2d day of April, 1859, George W. Nichols filed allegations in writing against the validity of the said will and the competency of the proofs thereof, and the Surrogate issued a citation to the widow and other legatees residing in the City of New-York to show cause why the probate of said will should not be revoked. This proceeding commenced a contest as to the personal estate of the deceased under said will, and upon the trial of the allegations before the Surrogate it appeared by the testimony of the witnesses produced and examined, that the testator made the will while in comparative health and on the eve of his departure for Europe, that he dictated all the provisions thereof, and that Mr. George W. Nichols, who filed said allegations, was also present, and united in the consultations as to the will, and made suggestions. The consultation was at Mr. Brown's store, and lasted nearly two hours, and George W. Nichols was present the whole time. The will was then engrossed, and taken to the Everitt house where the testator was staying with his family, and was there executed by him in due form. Other testimony was taken showing the state of his mind at time of the execution of his will; that it was sound; that he was a good business man and competent in every respect to transact business. The case of the argument was submitted to the Surrogate, who the ensuing day, debided that the will was properly admitted to Probate, and he entered an order confirming the same. A. M. Bradford for the executor; Choate & Barnes for contestant.

Interesting from China.

The Rev. R. S. MACLAY, one of the Methodist Missionaries in China, concludes a letter dated Fuh Chau, April 6, with the following:

"Two events of great significance in the political world have recently been noticed in the 'Pekin Gazette,' the organ of the Imperial Government in China. One is the announcement that henceforth Shanhai is to supercede Canton as the centre of foreign negotiations with China. The French and the United States legations have been transferred to Shanghai, and the English will establish their Minister at Pekin. Thus the provisions of the Tientsin Treaty are coming into operation, theory is becoming practice. The other item is the Chinese Government's official disclaimer of a paper said to have emanated from Pekin, and intercepted by the allies at Canton; in which it was stated that the Government of China would not enforce the provisions of the Tientsin Treaty. The official disclaimer of the Chinese Government furnishes another proof of its determination to abide by the Treaty.

Yours very truly,
R. S. MACLAY.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

We have advices from Europe one day later, by the arrival of the steamship Nova Scotian at Further Point, on her way to Quebec. She sailed from Liverpool on the 15th inst. There had been no further collision between the belligerent forces in Italy, but the news is nevertheless quite important. The evacuation of Bologna by the Austrians was announced in the Bremen's news, published yesterday morning. We now learn that after their retreat the Cardinal Legate also departed, and the Municipality proclaimed VICTOR EMANUEL Dictator. The Austrians were also evacuating Modena, and were in full retreat towards the river Oglio. FRANCIS JOSEPH was about to assume command of his army in person, and had already ordered a new position to be taken up. Meantime, NAPOLEON has removed his head-quarters to Gorgonzola, on the other side of the River Adda, which was crossed on the 12th by the French army by means of two bridges of boats. VICTOR EMANUEL had issued an order highly complimentary to GARIBALDI, and awarding him a gold medal of the military order. From Prussia, we learn of an order for the mobilization of the Army, which movement is interpreted by the London Morning Herald, Lord DERBY'S organ, to mean nothing else but war. The new English Cabinet had not yet been formed, though the most important offices were believed to have been filled. It was certain that Lord JOHN RUSSELL would undertake the management of Foreign Affairs, and it was believed that Mr. GLADSTONE would join the Government. Lord ELGIN and Sir JAMES GRAHAM were also spoken of. It was thought that an authorized list of the Cabinet would not be made public before Friday, the 17th. The Liverpool Cotton market was quiet, and prices were unchanged. Breadstuffs were generally lower, and Provisions were dull. The English funds had received some impulse, and Consols were quoted at 93⅜@93⅝ for account.

We have this morning a somewhat more definite dispatch relative to the Mexican news by the Tennessee at New-Orleans. It seems that the conducta of five millions, after being detained at Jalapa by Gen. ROBLES, was permitted by him to proceed, but that it was subsequently overtaken by him at the National Bridge, and ordered, in the name of MIRAMON, to return to Jalapa. The conducta refused to obey this order, when an attempt was made by ROBLES to ship it on board a British man-of-war, but the commander of the vessel refused to receive it, and it still remained at Reconada, subject to the order of ROBLES. The British Minister, ORWAY, had acquiesced in an order banishing all English subjects from the capital.

The steamship Empire City, from New-Orleans on the 20th inst., and Havana on the 23d, arrived at this port last night. The health of Havana is reported to be unusually good. The Empire City brought upwards of $425,000 in specie—$100,000 from New-Orleans, and the rest from Havana.

We have advices from Havana to the 25th inst. There is no news of importance. Sugars were quiet and prices were unchanged.

The Overland California Mail, which arrived at St. Louis on Saturday evening, from San Francisco on the 3d inst., brings intelligence of the breaking out of another revolution in Sonora, under the lead of GANDARA. The Indians had taken the field in his favor, and the Church party with their assistance, had captured several towns. No more definite intelligence is vouchsafed us in the telegram forwarded from St. Louis.

Governor BANKS, of Massachusetts, on invitation of the Ten Governors, in company with a few friends, made the tour of our Island Institutions yesterday, for the purpose of inspecting their practical workings. Governor BANKS made an exceedingly happy address to the Randall's Island children, and expressed himself as highly gratified with the results of his trip. Governors SMITH, MOLONEY and OLIVER did the honors of the occasion.

A communication from JAMES R. DEY, formerly contractor for the removal of night soil, charging the Mayor with misrepresenting him grossly, was sent to the Board of Aldermen last evening, and referred. The report of the Superintendent of Markets was referred. The quarterly report of the Comptroller was presented, and it was directed that it be printed. A resolution directing that no fireworks be exhibited in front of the City Hall on the Fouth of July created a spicy debate; the resolution was lost. The resolution from the Board of Councilmen, directing the Street Commissioner to prepare specifications and advertise for proposals to restore the City Hall to its former condition, was concurred in, and the Board adjourned to Thursday.

The Board of Councilmen met last evening, and, having transacted much routine business, adjourned till next Thursday evening at 6 o'clock.

Judge ROOSEVELT'S decision in the Police case, The People on the relation of Thomas Beatty vs. The Board of Police Commissioners, will be found reported at length in our columns this morning.

In less than a week we have had occasion to record two stabbing cases in Brooklyn by schoolboys under ten years of age, one of which proved fatal within twenty minutes after the blow was struck—and to-day we have another. JOHN SHANNON, ten years old, stabbed a boy named ELISHA THATFORD, nine years old, with a pocket-knife, inflicting a dangerous wound in the back. The boys reside in Gowanus, and attended Public School No. 10 in Fifteenth-street. The stab was given while the boys were out at recess and was caused by a trifling dispute.

Mrs. EMMA LODGE was arrested yesterday in Brooklyn on a charge of malpractice in causing the death of Mrs. KENNY, at No. 14 Rapelyea-street. The case will be investigated to-day.

Yesterday, the sales of Cotton reached only 600 bales at unaltered prices. Flour attracted less attention, and inferior, and common lots were lower. Grain generally was very quiet. Prices of Wheat, Rye and Oats, steadily favored buyers. Corn exhibited rather more firmness. The movements in Provisions were restricted. Pork advanced slightly. Coffee and Rice were decidedly more sought after. Sugars and Molasses were less freely dealt in. Hay was in fair request. Hops, Naval Stores, and Oils were quiet. The Freight engagement were limited.

The Austrians in Italy.

If we can put any confidence in the war news, which is fabricated at Berne and Vienna for the western markets, the Emperor FRANCIS JOSEPH has really assumed the command of his armies in Italy, and is organizing them as rapidly as possible behind the lines of the Oglio and the Adige, to await the attack of his advancing enemies.

The experiment, if the young Emperor has really ventured upon it, is a very hazardous one. FRANCIS JOSEPH possesses no experience as a general, and in his brief career as a soldier has seen more of Austrian overthrows than of Austrian victories. He is popular with the army, but his popularity is not of that kind which brings with it the prestige necessary to revive the flagging spirits of an army depressed by a hasty and discreditable retreat varied only by successive defeats at each successive halt. The intrinsic superiority of the allied soldiery over their antagonists has now become fortified by the feeling of confidence in their commander; and the terrible French bayonet, which has done its work so thoroughly between the Po and the Adda will hardly fail to clear every field of open battle on which Austria may venture to make a stand between the Adda and the Adriatic. It should, however, be said that the whole tenor of the latest news tends to justify the impression that the Austrian army is making the best of its way out of the country of pitched battles on the plain within the protection of its fortified ports in the rivers Mincio and Adige, and the Lago di Garda. And although it would be very rash to predict anything positively of the plans of a strategist so daring as the Third NAPOLEON appears from his campaign on the Ticino to be, the direction of the French advance across the Adda, when coupled with the victories of GARIBALDI and CANROBERT in the Bergamaok country, incline us to anticipate a march of the Allies upon Brescia and Desenzano, with the object of seizing the heights to the west of Peschiera, and of reducing that angle of the Austrian quadrilateral defence by a sudden and decisive attack. Such an attack, if it were accompanied by an advance of the corps of Prince NAPOLEON from the South in the direction of Ferrara and Legnago, and by a landing on the Adriatic coast, might result in shutting the Austrians up in Mantua and Verona, and thus in bringing the war rapidly to an issue.

A great deal has been talked and written of their "quadilateral defence" into which the Austrian armies are apparently retiring; but a few words in respect to it may not be out of place here. If the reader will take up the map of Lombardy and Venice, he will see at the head of the Lago di Garde a point called Peschiera, from which the River Mincio flows away in a southeasterly direction about twenty miles, to Mantua. About twenty-five miles to the east of Mantua he will find the town of Legnago, on the River Adige, and by following that river northwesterly he will come to Verona, about twenty-five miles from Legnago, and about half that distance from Peschiera. These points inclose the "quadilateral defence" of Austria in Italy—a defence formidable, firstly, because each of these four points is a well-fortified post, two of them, Mantua and Verona, ranking with the strongest towns in Europe; and, secondly, because the rivers of the Mincio and the Adige are both swift, broad streams, flowing through a damp, low, marshy and dangerous country; and, thirdly, because by the railway which runs from Verona northward through the Val Lagarina, and by Roveredo to Trent in the Tyrol, the Austrian army can keep its communications easily open with the rest of the Empire. This feature in especial of the positions on the Adige and Mincio, has probably become of the very first importance to the Austrians in the present juncture, since it was evidently within the power of the Allies under GARIBALDI, at the latest advices, to throw themselves from Bergamo, Lecco, and Sondrio in the Valtelline, upon the two great passes of the Stelvio and the Mont Tonal, and by seizing Bormio and the Val Camonica, to block up the way from Germany into Italy against the Austrians to the west of the Lago di Garda. Could the Allies therefore succeed in possessing themselves of Peschiera, it is clear that they would gain a tremendous advantage over their antagonists. The seizure of Brescia seemed already within their grasp. This ancient city, known for years as Brescia l'amata, from the vast manufacture of weapons of war carried on here, is one of the fiercest and most unsubdued of the Lombard towns. It was cruelly sacked and put to pillage by HAYNAU in 1848, after a furious conflict, and the vengeance of the Brescians must assuredly have put their city into the hands of the Allies very soon after the defeats of the Austrians on the Bergamo road. From Brescia the country runs in hills to the southwestern shore of the Lago di Garda, where it begins to fall into plain again about Desenzano, and two or three miles further on, at Peschiera, becomes entirely flat. With the feeling of the people in their favor, and the Austrians retiring routed before them, this disposition of the country would signally favor the French advance on Peschiera. The fortress itself, which here commands the Mincio, and protects the flank of the Tyrolese Railway line, is small, and unless it has been newly strengthened with earth-works, (which would appear to be very doubtful,) can offer no prolonged resistance to such siege trains as the French army is reported to carry with it.

Hard by Peschiera, and about half way between that place and Desenzano, the little peninsula of Sirmio, famous as the poetic home of that most poetic of Romans, CATULLUS, runs out into the lake, and offers a formidable position for hostile artillery bearing upon the fortress. It is possible that the Austrian army at Cremona and Pizzighettone may be pushed up along the line of the river Oglio, to arrest the French advance by a battle on the way to Peschiera and the Mincio, but this, as we have already said, does not appear to us probable. Should it be attempted, and result in a signal defeat of the Austrian forces, it would be difficult for the beaten army to preserve, not Peschiera only, but Mantua and Verona themselves, from the conquerors.

In truth, the time lost by the Austrians, and gained by the French, during the foolish marchings and countermarchings of GYULAI in Sardinia, and the decisive operations of GARIBALDI in Lombardy, will be found, we think, to have given a wider scope to the results of the victory of Magenta than was at first perceived, and has seriously affected the military value in the present campaign of the famous position on which the Italian strength of Austria has been supposed to rest.

A FITTING SACRIFICE.—Let the whole City heartily rejoice!

The City Hall is on the point of demolition. They are planting platforms around it, digging mines beneath it, preparing fire and gunpowder to blast it withal; and on the Fourth of July next it will be blown to atoms, that not one stone shall be left upon another. At least we infer this from the appearances of activity observable about the building for the last three or four days. Five lame men with spades, and a boy with a hammer have been busily employed in the vicinity of the great entrance during that time; and the whole esplanade in front of the edifice is converted into a sandy waste. To ask anybody to suppose the City Government capable of repairing the Hall, after the last year's experience, would be an insult to the sanity of our readers. It is clear, therefore, that all this engineering is "miching mallecho," and means mischief, or what would be mischief in any other case. In the case of the City Hall our worst enemy alone can wish it permanence. It is a shabby sepulchre as it now stands, and can never be anything better. If the brilliant BULTKEL will make himself the EROSTRATUS of Gotham, and touch the whole dismal shell off with a good noisy Roman candle in honor of the Fourth, we shall be tempted to forgive him his foray against the regattas, and his hydrophobia on the subject of public fountains.

A Splendid Theft.

The latest eccentricity of Mexican politics is the capture of a Government conducta of five millions of dollars, on its way from the capital to the seaboard. This feat was accomplished, the telegraph informs us, by Gen. ROBLES-PEZUELA, some forty miles from the city. It is further stated that two-fifths of the amount was American property, and the remainder principally British. The Government of MIRAMON had in vain negotiated for its release; Minister MCLANE had dispatched an envoy to beg off the American share of the spoils, with what success we are not told; and an English fleet had resumed its position before Vera Cruz, by way of recovering the British dollars.

It will be remembered that, under the double pressure of poverty and the foreign legations, the rival Presidents of Mexico had established a tacit understanding that any conducta of specie leaving the capital, should have undisturbed "egress and regress" at Vera Cruz. The arrangement has diverted the outward flow of the precious metals from difficult and dangerous mountain roads leading to distant seaports, back to the old channel, much to the benefit of the Liberal treasury, and greatly to the security, it had been supposed, of the valuable convoy. Surrounded by a body of well-tried troops, the train has heretofore passed in safety—the numbers guarding it proving too formidable for the daring of the ordinary brigands that beset the road. But an extraordinary brigand has suddenly appeared in the person of an Ex-Envoy Extraordinary near the Cabinet of Washington. Gen. ROBLES, the Minister of COMONFORT and ZULOAGA in this country, won for himself a position of great influence with the Administration of Mr. BUCHANAN. In the earlier stages of the struggle between the Constitutionalists and the Church party, he was the chief reliance of our State Department for information upon Mexican affairs; and finally acquired so extravagant an influence as to succeed in impressing our Government with the idea that he had only to return to the Mexican capital to rally about him a party drawn from the two contending factions which should restore peace at once to the Republic. At that time all American journalists whose acquaintance with Mexican affairs prompted them to urge that recognition of the Liberal cause, which has since been effected, were constantly met with assurances of the entire settlement of the question. The suggestion of the topic merely caused our venerable Secretary of State to lay one finger metaphorically upon his nose, and assure us with a wink of wisdom, that all was right; ROBLES was to do the business for us. ROBLES, not JUAREZ, was the man; "Codlin, not Short." There were grave suspicions hanging about the business unquestionably. It was not forgotten that Mr. BUCHANAN had been Secretary of State when that shrewd device of sending SANTA ANNA back to turn the American successes in Mexico to defeat was contrived and completed, and the cases were unpleasantly similar.

The sequel is too fresh for us to detail it again. ROBLES returned to his country, performed his pronunciamiento, ascertained the wishes of the partisans upon whom he had been counting, and found them unanimously in favor of the beardless MIRAMON rather than of his confident self. The position of ROBLES was thereupon at once defined. He became a camp-follower of the new master, whom he had unwittingly raised to power, and an active supporter of the ultra-ecclesiastical faction. When MIRAMON made that bootless foray into the State of Vera Cruz last March, ROBLES was at his side; and when again the young chieftain beat a hasty retreat to save his capital from the besieging enemy and himself from capture, ROBLES was left in charge of the infantry and guns, which the mountain flight of MIRAMON obliged him to abandon. With this force, ROBLES has at last distinguished himself. It is quite probable he may regard his splendid financial operation as another "forced loan," and use the treasure to accomplish that ambitious aim which was missed so shabbily in December. But in the meantime, the plundered parties are without redress. It is in vain for English or French subjects to demand reparation of MIRAMON; and quite out of the question for the United States to apply to the friendly JUAREZ to make good this theft, perpetrated upon his impoverished exchequer. Is not this then that "eventual crisis" in Mexican affairs, which should make external intervention inevitable and immediate?

Stopping a Leak.

It has been the custom hitherto for the City Inspector's Department to pay its bills for work done by the day, at the Essex Market office, the money having been received from the Comptroller upon requisition. It has not been the custom, however, to pay promptly or punctually. If a man did three days' work upon the streets, when he went on Wednesday for his pay, he was told that he must wait till the Department was in funds. The same story, with a few variations, was told time after time, till the laborer consented to take an order on the Department, certified by the Ward Inspector, of which he was instantly forced, by the urgency of his necessities, to dispose at a corner grocery, on a discount of 25 per cent, in payment for potatoes and tea. Consequently, when the Department at last came into its funds, nine-tenths of the orders presented were in the hands of men who had bought them up. The same Ward Inspector who had certified the orders made out the pay-roll for his Ward, and there was nothing but his stern integrity in circumstances of great temptation to prevent a flood of forged or bogus orders from coming up for payment. When the last pay-day came round, Mayor TIEMANN, the Chamberlain, Comptroller, and City Inspector, went up together to Essex Market to superintend the paying off, and the very curious result was that five thousand dollars worth of orders proved by the books to be out, were not presented for payment! And yet if these orders would have borne official scrutiny, there could be no conceivable reason for declining to present them for exchange into cash. Whether the four gentlemen named above will consent always to be present to see how the money goes, we do not know. But it would certainly seem to be a fair inference from the facts, that at least one bad leak in the Treasury may thus be stopped. The game, at the rate revealed last week, would plainly be worth the candle.

Protection to Our Flag.

The English at Hong Kong are complaining, and not altogether without reason, that while the American merchantmen are rapidly monopolizing the carrying trade with China, the English men-of-war should be expected to do police duty for these successful interlopers. At the latest dates from that peppery, but prosperous, little colony, it appears that seven-eighths of the vessels trading in the port were American; while, on the other hand, not a single American man-of-war was to be found within a thousand miles. Rumors had reached Hong Kong that a large vessel, reported an American, was lying stranded on the Prata shoal, and the English naval commander had been called upon to send down a steam gunboat to inquire into the matter. In like manner, Her Britannic Majesty's war-ships had, on several recent occasions, been dispatched in search of pirates who had violated the American flag.

This state of things certainly affords rather a quaint commentary upon the magnificent orations of patriots like Mr. BOTTS, who are fully prepared at five minutes notice, to let slip the dogs of war upon any prince, potentate or Power whatsoever, in defence of our claim to supreme dominion over all the nationalities of the earth.

In the harbor of Hong Kong the entire trade of that colony with Australia, California, and India, was represented in the beginning of May by the American flag, not a single ton of British shipping loading for either of these countries against 2,860 American tons of American ownership for Australia; 1,185 for Calcutta, and 11,200 for San Francisco. Yet, at the same time, this far-sweeping American trade was literally and absolutely dependent upon the cruisers of Her Britannic Majesty for its protection. Here certainly is a plain, practical case, calling for the attention of all the loud-voiced enthusiasts who think the eagle of the Alleghanies ought with piercing eye to watch, and with terrible talons to defend the American citizen upon every shore and every sea.

Had the Government of Mr. BUCHANAN displayed half as much energy in fitting out the embassy to China with proper vessels-of-war as it has expended upon crushing party rebellions, and suppressing the dreadful wrath of petty office-holders, we should not now be playing the mendicant to Great Britain in the very waters from which the enterprise of our citizens is doing its best to drive her commerce. Had we sent out, eighteen months ago, the gunboats proper for service in the Chinese waters, we might now have had a small squadron in the East, which, maintained at the yearly cost of a single unwieldy first-class steamer, would have been abundantly equal to the protection of our mercantile interests, and to the real assertion of that national dignity about which we are forever prating, while we do so very little to sustain it.

Two Battles of Malegnano.

Twice within six weeks of the Italian campaign of 1859, it has been the fortune of the French army under NAPOLEON III. to win brilliant victories on spots already consecrated in the annals of French glory.

Full details are, as yet, wanting in regard to the action of June 8, at Malegnano, but it is sufficiently clear that the Austrians had intended to cover their retreat beyond the Adda, and afford time for a fresh concentration of their forces by the defence of this important post, and that they were driven from their entrenchments only after a severe contest of several hours' duration. By a curious coincidence, in the second battle of Malegnano, as in the second battle of Montebello, the relative positions of the French and their antagonists were reversed. In the first battle of Montebello, won by LANNES in 1800, it was the French who attacked, and the Austrians who stood on the defensive. In the second battle, won by FOREY, it was the Austrians who attacked, and the French who stood on the defensive. In the first battle of Malegnano, on the contrary, won by FRANCIS I., in 1515, it was the French who occupied the town, and the Swiss who endeavored to drive them out. In the second battle of Malegnano, it is the Austrians who hold the town, and the French who dislodge them.

The first battle of Malegnano was an action of great importance in the history of war. It has obtained the name of the "Battle of giants," from the fury with which it was contested, and it demonstrated the efficacy of artillery against infantry, when properly served, as completely as the Swiss victories of Morat and Nancy had established the power of infantry, when properly equipped and arrayed, to defeat the heavy cavalry of the middle ages. In this sense it is that the battle is treated of by military historians, and especially by the actual Emperor of the French, from whose work on the History of Artillery, we translate today in our columns a very interesting account of the conflict, written long before he could have had any reason to suppose that legions marching to battle under his own orders would revive the recollections of this bloody triumph in the annals of France.

Eclipsed as it since has been by grander modern campaigns, the passage of the Alps by FRANCIS I. of France, which led to this battle of 1515, was a most brilliant feat of strategy. It was accomplished under difficulties even greater than those which attended the crossing of the St. Bernard by General BONAPARTE, and was executed with such skill, secresy and celerity, that the great Roman General PROSPERO COLONNA, who was waiting at Villafranca, near Nice, to attack the French when they should descend into the plains of Piedmont, was surprised and made prisoner at dinner in his tent. In those times, as now, the military superiority of the French rested in no slight degree on their wonderful talent for organization, and their astonishing rapidity of movement.

VICIOUS ANIMALS AT LARGE.—Improbable as it may appear, a Coroner's Jury has done its duty at last. A child in the street at Albany was kicked by a horse—a bad horse, whose vicious propensities his owner knew,—and so severely injured that in a few minutes the little fellow died. The jury looked into the case carefully; heard the plain story of the witnesses; learned that the horse was running loose in the street, and that he had once before badly kicked a boy, read the statute, and then brought in their verdict, finding the owner of the animal guilty of manslaughter in the third degree. The man was arrested, taken to jail, bailed out, and his case will now go to the Grand Jury.

We trust this case will be "improved" to the community, for violators of the law on this subject abound in country and city. It is time that the owners of vicious animals should be reminded that it is at their own proper peril, as well as at the peril of other people's children, that they allow their beasts to go at large. The statute says,—"If the owner of a mischievous animal, knowing its propensity, wilfully suffer it to go at large, or shall keep it without ordinary care, and such animal, while so at large, or not confined, kill any human being who shall have taken all the precautions which the circumstances may permit to avoid such animal, such owner shall be deemed guilty of manslaughter in the third degree." The wisdom of the statute is as obvious as its meaning. The punishment provided for a conviction of manslaughter in the third degree is imprisonment in the State Prison for a term of not less than four nor more than seven years. It is not likely, perhaps, that in this special instance this penalty will be enforced, as the law has been so long a dead letter that its existence, probably, was not known to the offender. But, now that the law has been signally revived, a few more prompt verdicts of Coroners' Juries, with an occasional enforcement of the full penalty in cases of conviction, will save many human lives, and rid the streets of our cities, especially such as lead to the slaughter-houses, and the green highways of the country, of a great, growing and intolerable nuisance.

A FOOL AND HIS FEAT.—A being, probably an ape, but whose keepers call him by the rather human name of "Monsieur BLONDIN," it is publicly announced will walk on Thursday next across the chasm below Niagara Falls, upon a rope stretched from bank to bank for that purpose. The spot selected is half way between the Suspension Bridge and the Cataract, where the chasm is about a thousand feet wide, and the height above the water at which the rope is stretched is not far from two hundred feet. We believe that the Niagara River runs at this point between two civilized countries; and that there are a reasonable number of reasonably respectable Christian citizens living within hearing of this outrageous proclamation. If we are not mistaken in this belief, the gulf between M. BLONDIN'S promise and his performance, be he man or monkey, will be considerably wider than the great chasm of the river itself.

Such reckless and aimless exposure of life as is here projected is simply horrible, be that life what it may. Thoughtless people, meaning no special harm, may promise themselves a sort of excitement in looking at a fellow-creature in deadly peril, and in shuddering through the moments of the indecent exhibition. This coarse sentiment would attract thousands to see a man cross Niagara on a rope, as it would draw them to see a dog-fight or a bull-baiting. But the authorities on the spot owe it to themselves, to the community in which they live, and to the whole country, to kill this thing at once and decisively. New-York has been sufficiently disgraced already by the senseless plaudits which urged that poor simpleton Sam Patch to leap to his death from the brow of the Genesee Falls, at Rochester, thirty years ago.

If M. BLONDIN is really a man, inflamed with a mad desire of throwing his life upon a tight-rope, let him retire to some secret gorge of the Himalaya and indulge his morbid passion without shocking the decencies of human society. If, being a man, he is merely a mountebank bent on earning the money of unreflecting people by this vile trifling with the sanctities of life, let him be arrested at once, before the noblest scenery of the New World is desecrated by a show of which savages might be ashamed.

Amusements.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—The burlesque of "Massaniello," tortured from the opera by the Brothers BROUGH, and modestly localized by a gentleman of this City, was produced here last night, with decided success. The GOUGENHEIM Sisters are addicted to this species of composition, and seem willing to stake their chances of success on the public appreciation of their efforts. There cannot be a shadow of a doubt that our people are fond of burlesques, and, in short, of everything that has uproarious fun and extravagance in it. The majority of English pieces are unsuited to this latitude, and their localization is generally a failure. In cases like the present, however, where the story is perfectly well known, it is a little different. We are not at all surprised that the Misses GOUGENHEIM find it to their interests to persevere in their efforts to naturalize the Brothers BROUGH. They are seen to rare advantage in the pieces which these gentlemen turn out with such wonderful facility. And it is saying much, for a good burlesque actress is expected to possess a variety of accomplishments not often found in combination; she must sing and dance and look pretty, and imitate vivaciously the ludicrous points of general acting, and be herself an actress of superior intelligence. The Misses GOUGENHEIM enter into the fun of what they do with infinite zest; they are, if anything, a little too fond of "going it"—but this in hot weather is a fault on the right side. The contemplation of exertion is never unpleasant, provided you are not called upon to share it. The way Miss JORY throws herself into the absurdity of a situation is a warning of the most acceptable sort; it is cool and refreshing from its very intensity. Miss ADELAIDE is more circumspect, and seldom exceeds the bounds of discretion. Both are good, and the contrast that exists between them is decidedly advantageous to the best points of each.

There is more of absurdity than of wit in "Massaniello," but it will probably suffice as a vehicle of laughter for our country friends. The play was acted with spirit by the ladies, but the gentlemen seemed to be in much uncertainty concerning the text. More rehearsals are needed. Mr. BAKER'S music was excellent, and the dancing of Mlle. CHRISTINE and M. ZAVISROWSKI created a perfect furore. These artists are excellent. The result was a success.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Nicholas Longworth, the veteran vine-grower in Cincinnati, recently declined an invitation to participate in a railroad opening celebration, in the following curt terms:

DEAR SIR: Young Jerseymen are fond of traveling on railroads, where no charge is made. I therefore regret that I cannot accept the invitation to visit Chicago. The absence of my son and son-in-law deprives me of the pleasure of visiting that flourishing city.

Yours, respectfully, N. LONGWORTH.

A long postscript follows, in which Mr. L. abuses the editor of the Chicago Press and Tribune, who had spoken disrespectfully of his wine cellar.

The Missouri Senate has been engaged for a fortnight investigating the charges against Judge Jackson, who was impeached for malfeasance in office. A correspondent of the St. Louis Republican says: The testimony brought forward by the prosecution is generally regarded as very direct in the substantiation of most of the specifications in the articles of impeachment. Some thirty witnesses, sworn for the defence, gave evidence chiefly in reply to a question put by the respondent, viz.: "Do you know of Judge Jackson having been guilty of innumerable instances of contumelious conduct?"

Bishop Odenheimer has accepted the Bishopric of New-Jersey. His salary ($3,000) has been secured by the establishment of a permanent fund; James Potter, Esq., of Princeton, heading the list with a subscription of $1,000.

Governor Morgan, while in Buffalo, was made the hero of a series of public and private entertainments. He received a pressing invitation to visit Rochester, but signified by telegraph his inability to accept.

Col. Mansfield, U. S. A.; the Rev. Dr. Cutler of San Francisco, and the tragedian Anderson, arrived in this City yesterday from California, by the Moses Taylor.

Mr. Bromley, editor of the Norwich (Conn.) Bulletin, was presented with a silver service in Hartford last week, the gift of his friends.

The prosecution of the notorious H. Clay Pate, for negro stealing in Missouri, has ended in his acquittal.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

SAD TERMINATION OF A LONG LIFE.—A few evenings since, two Third Precinct Policemen discovered a very old man lying among a heap of rubbish upon one of the docks near the Washington Market, in a fit. They conveyed him to the Station-house, where he died in agony a few minutes afterwards, though Police Surgeon KENNEDY was almost immediately present, and rendered all possible aid. The unfortunate man rallied sufficiently at times to give some account of himself. He stated his age to be 74 years; that he formerly resided on Long Island, and that he had living in this City a wife, daughter, son-in-law, and other relatives, whose names and residences he gave. To these parties information was sent, but none of them visited the Station-house, and a gentleman who took some interest in the matter called personally upon them, and received for an answer that they "had come to the conclusion that they could do nothing for him." An inquest was held, after which preparations were made to inter the body in Potters Field, but before the public hearse arrived Mr. E. MERIAM, of Brooklyn Heights, the well known meteorologist, came to the Station house, and on learning the state of affairs, requested that the body might be given him for decent burial. His request was granted, and the forsaken old man was that same day interred in Mr. MERIAM'S own lot in Greenwood. Mr. MERIAM said that the man who thus so miserably died was years ago a man of some prominence, and an intimate of LAFAYETTE, who up to the time of the latter's death, corresponded with him. From other statements it appeared that the deceased had of late years become dissipated, and to this circumstance is attributed the extraordinary conduct of his relatives in refusing to recognize him even when dead.

HEALTH COMMISSIONERS.—The Health Commissioners met at noon, yesterday. Dr. GUNN reported that the brig Batis, from Porto Cabello, with a cargo of hides and coffee, and the brig Henry D. Sheare, from the Rio Grande, similarly laden, had arrived. The ports from which they came were healthy, and he had given them stream permits. He asked for information of the Board relative to granting stream permits to West India vessels, without regard to their cargo. The Mayor thought permits should be granted in all cases to vessels that were clean and from healthy ports. The Board thought so too. Mr. PECHIN and others complained of the condition of a cess-pool and sink at No. 308 Seventh-avenue. The City Inspector was directed to look into the matter, and abate the nuisance if any was found to exist. The City Inspector reported that the Corporation Attorney would take measures to secure the abatement of the nuisance at No. 568 Greenwich-street; that the nuisance at Nos. 291 and 293 Broadway had been abated; and that directions had been given for the removal of the manure from the place complained of on Eighty-fourth street, between Fourth and Fifth avenues, at the expense of the owner. It was directed that a nuisance at No. 51 Ridge-street should be abated. The City Inspector presented reports from various Health Wardens, setting forth the condition of the streets. They were accepted, and the Board adjourned to Wednesday.

FERRIS FEMALE INSTITUTE COMMENCEMENT.—The first Annual Commencement of this Institution was held on Friday, in the Madison-avenue Presbyterian Church. The body of the church was reserved for the pupils of the Institute and their friends. Every seat was occupied, and the galleries were crowded. The Rev. Dr. FERRIS, Rector of the Institute, presided. In front of the pulpit sat the Board of Visitors, and several other distinguished gentlemen. The young ladies were neatly attired, and presented a charming appearance. The exercises were opened by a greeting song, by the pupils. The Rev. Dr. FERRIS followed in prayer. The reports of the Committee were then read, and the premiums and testimonials awarded. The exercises were interspersed with excellent singing by the young ladies, Professor LASON, their teacher, presiding at the piano. After the distribution of a large number of books and other testimonials, the gold medal prize was awarded. Miss SUSIE D. DAYTON, of the Middle Department, received a gold medal for her essay, entitled "Our Dependence on the Creator." Miss JANNIE DE LA MONTAGNIE, authoress of The Untitled Majestics, carried away the medal from the Senior Department, and also a special premium for proficiency in French. Miss CAROLINE S. EWEN received a gold medal for the greatest proficiency in French. To Miss VICTORIA WETHERSPOON was awarded a medal for the greatest improvement in penmanship, and also the Mathematical medal, which is considered the highest honor of the Institute. To Miss ISABEL DAVETT was awarded a premium for the best oil-painting, and to her sister, ANGELINA M., one for the best drawing. Miss MARIA HEGEMAN and Miss JULIA A. THOMPSON took premiums for excellence in French. Miss EMILY C. DAVIES took a special premium for proficiency in mathematics. The following young ladies, of the graduating class, received diplomas: Miss Sarah J. de la Montagnie, Misses Emily A. C. Davies, Caroline G. Ewen, H. Ferris, Fannie Hamilton, Mary E. Ostrander, Emma Phelps, Helen Stewart, Victoria Wetherspoon.

STREET CLEANING.—The Clerk of the Weather and the dirt cartmen of the Fifth and Sixth Wards interfered seriously with the arrangements of the City Inspector for carrying on the work of cleaning the streets vigorously last week. The cartmen struck for higher wages, but Mr. DELAVAN induced them to go to work again without an increased compensation, and the transactions of the week, summed up below, were not so unfruitful as might be supposed. There were 2,019 loads of manure, 5,066 of dirt and rubbish, and 6,441 of ashes removed at a cost to the City of $4,472 15. From the Seventeenth Ward over 600 loads of ashes were removed, and little over 200 from the Fifteenth Ward. The total number of loads of ashes, dirt, manure and rubbish removed from the First Ward was 465; from the Second, 499; from the Third, 725; from the Fourth, 664; from the Fifth, 566; from the Sixth, 520; from the Seventh, 714; from the Eighth, 671; from the Ninth, 849; from the Eleventh, 791; from the Fourteenth, 431; from the Fifteenth, 397; from the Seventeenth, 1,185; from the Eighteenth, 111; from the Nineteenth, 449; from the Twentieth, 1,190; from the Twenty-first, 1,501; from the Twenty-second, 617. Total in all the Wards, 13,546. The Tenth, Thirteenth and Sixteenth Wards are not included in the above statement, because they are under contract. In the Twelfth Ward only a few days' work was required.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE FOURTH OF JULY.—The Joint Committee of the Common Council charged with the preparations for the celebration of the Fourth of July, met at 3 P. M. yesterday, Alderman PECK presiding. The Committee on Stands reported in favor of awarding the contracts for furnishing stands to JOHN B. GRIDLEY, the lowest bidder, who is to furnish nine stands for $132 75. Mr. TAYLOR, the clerk of the Committee, read the programme for the celebration of the day, prepared by him under the direction of the Committee. A slight alteration was made and the programme was adopted. It will be published in the papers to-morrow. Alderman LYNES suggested that each member of the Committee be appointed to take charge of one of the places at which fireworks were to be exhibited. Many members of the Committee hesitated when asked whether they would be responsible for the fireworks in the Park, and the possible burning of the City Hall, and it was finally resolved that the Chairman should assign to each his task in this regard. The Committee adjourned to meet at the call of the Chairman. The regatta will be a novel part of the celebration this year.

UNKNOWN MEN FOUND DROWNED.—Coroner JACKMAN yesterday held an inquest upon the body of an unknown man found floating in the water at the foot of Bank-street. The body was entirely naked when found, which renders it probable that deceased was drowned while bathing. It liquor shops were closed last Sunday. In the Ninth Precinct, out of 270 groceries, only two were found open.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE EUCLEIAN SOCIETY.—The Eucleian Society of the University of New-York, held its anniversary exercises, last evening, in the large hall of the University building. Besides the members of the Society, there were present many of their friends and acquaintances, including a large number of ladies. The proceedings were opened by music from the band, followed by prayer; after which, the orator of the evening, the Rev. Dr. THOMPSON, of the Tabernacle, delivered an eloquent address, taking for his subject, "Literary Culture for Educated Men." By culture, in this sense, he meant that refinement of letters which are in superposition to education. Education precedes culture as plowing precedes sowing. The study of language—not in the mechanical way in which the classics are usually studied in colleges, but so that the soul of the writer shall pass into his own; the study of history, not for dates and incidents merely, but for the development of national life; and the æsthetic aspects of science, when removed from fancy and dilettanteism, were urged by the orator as necessary to true culture. The address was loudly applauded at the conclusion of his remarks. The poet of the evening was Prof. PARSON, of Rutgers Institute.

SECOND DAIRY FIRE IN BROOME-STREET.—A fire took place about 9½ o'clock on Sunday evening, in a wood-shed under the tenement building, No. [illegible] Broome-street, in the premises of CAROLINE LEGGE, a German woman. After extinguishing this fire another was discovered in the basement occupied by the same person, and was speedily put out. The fires were evidently the work of an incendiary. A son of LEBELT, named THEODORE, was arrested on suspicion.

FIRE IN A WINE-BOTTLING ESTABLISHMENT.—A fire broke out at 7¾ o'clock last evening, on the third floor of No. 179 Pearl-street, in the wine-bottling establishment of CORDOVA & NUNES. The fire originated in a tub containing a quantity of combustible material, as the tub stood near several casks of camphene. The Fire Marshal is engaged in investigating the matter. The damage done by the fire trifling.

ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE.—A woman named ELLEN SHEPHARD, having been arrested by the Fourth Ward Police last night, on some trivial charge, attempted to hang herself in her cell, but was discovered by the doorman of the Station-house and cut down. She was nearly dead when discovered.

THE REMOVAL OF NIGHT SOIL—THE MARKETS—THE COMPTROLLER'S QUARTERLY REPORT—FIREWORKS IN FRONT OF THE CITY HALL—REMINISCENCES OF THE CABLE CELEBRATION, BY ALDERMAN BRADY.

At the meeting of the Board of Aldermen last evening, a message from the Mayor, assigning his reasons for declining to sign the resolutions authorizing the Comptroller to lease part of the premises No. 400 Grand-street, for five years, at a rent not exceeding $1,000 per annum, for the Fifth Judicial Court, was read and laid over. The Mayor thinks the rent is too high and the location unsuitable.

A petition setting forth that an intolerable nuisance has been created by the manner in which the carrying away of night soil via the Pier foot of Houston-street, North River, is conducted and asking its abatement, was referred.

A petition from James R. Dey, in relation to the message of the Mayor vetoing the resolution with regard to the removal of night-soil, was read. Mr. Dey characterizes the communication of the Mayor as "untrue and outrageous," and asks that he (the petitioner) and others may be examined under oath with regard to the statements made therein. The petition was referred to the Committee on Wharves, Piers and Slips, and it was directed that the affidavit of Messrs. Dey & Woodruff be printed in the minutes, and published in the official papers, in connection with the veto.

Alderman BOOTH offered a resolution inviting the Mayor to meet in convention with the members of the Board of Aldermen, at 3 P. M., on Monday, July 18, in the chamber of the Board, for the purpose of appointing clerks for the District Courts of the City. It was adopted.

The City Inspector presented the report of the Superintendent of Markets, setting forth that Washington, Fulton and Clinton Markets are, and for some time have been, in need of repairs, and that Centre Market is now being repaired. It was referred to the Committee on Markets.

The Quarterly Report of the Comptroller for the three months ending March 31 was read, and it was directed that it be printed.

During the quarter ending March 31, the Comptroller paid out $3,815,026 79, as follows: On City Accounts, $788 324 55; on Special and Trust Accounts, $3,046,702 24. The Comptroller, under the system which he inaugurated when he came into office, is enabled very readily and exactly to ascertain the condition of the City Accounts. All the disbursements are classified under appropriate heads. Under "City Accounts" are placed the receipts and expenditures for the support of the City Government, and for which provision is made by taxation; under "Trust Accounts" the receipts and payments on account of loans obtained upon Revenue Bonds, [illegible] payments, as well as receipts on account of any street and other improvements, the cost of which is defrayed by assessments upon property deemed benefited thereby, and the receipts and payments on account of Intestate Estates; and the "Special Accounts" are those which exhibit the receipts and expenditures on account of the construction of the Public Works, for the cost of which provision is made by the issue of Corporation Stocks redeemable from the sinking fund or otherwise.

A resolution offered by Alderman STARR, directing that no fireworks be exhibited in front of the City Hall on the Fourth of July, was strenuously opposed by Alderman PECK.

Alderman STARR hoped no more fireworks would be exhibited near the City Hall. At the time of the Cable Celebration the Committee promised to be very careful, yet the City Hall caught fire, and much was lost that could not be restored.

Alderman BRADY said there was no reason to suppose that the City Hall would catch fire on the Fourth of July, because it had caught fire on the occasion of the Cable Celebration. At that time the Common Council had gone wild, and he had seen members drinking freely; but because the Hall had caught fire when members were intoxicated, there was no reason to believe that there would be a conflagration on the Fourth of July.

The President said they must have been Councilmen whom the gentleman had seen intoxicated: assuredly they were not Aldermen.

Alderman PECK was surprised that the gentleman should get up and charge members of the Common Council with gross intemperance.

Alderman STARR seldom replied to personal attacks, but the remarks of the gentleman might be deemed to be aimed at any one of those present. For himself, he was out of town on the occasion referred to.

Alderman MCSPEDON (in the Chair) said it was false that there had been any negligence on the part of the Common Council on the occasion of the cable celebration. He himself had gone over the building with others after the celebration was over to see that all was safe.

Alderman ADAMS had not seen a single member of the Common Council intoxicated on that occasion. He himself was not so.

Alderman BRADY said all the Aldermen who had just spoken had said that what he had said was not so. He reiterated that members of the Common Council were drunk on the occasion referred to.

Alderman PECK called him to order. He had no right to talk about members of the last Common Council in connection with this subject.

The President decided that Alderman BRADY was out of order.

Alderman BRADY claimed that he had said nothing personal. He had not said that any particular Alderman was "drunk."

Alderman ADAMS said he staid at home when he got drunk; he didn't go around looking at other drunken men.

The resolution was lost.

A report in favor of donating $2,000 to the American Female Guardian Society, was adopted.

A resolution from the Board of Councilmen directing the Street Commissioner to prepare specifications and advertise for proposals to restore the City Hall to its former condition, was concurred in.

The Board adjourned to Thursday.

Board of Councilmen.

CLEANING BROADWAY—FERRY ACCOMMODATIONS, &C.

The Board of Councilmen met last evening at 6 o'clock. Among the petitions presented was one from the Committee of Residents on Broadway, who, in consequence of the refusal of the Corporation to clean that street oftener than twice a week, organized themselves into an association for the purpose of having it swept more frequently. The petition represents that the weekly cost, for the last two years, of cleaning Broadway has been $200, of which the Corporation has paid but $120 weekly, and asks that the Common Council shall provide for the repayment of the whole expenditure. It was referred.

The report of the Committee on Wharves, Piers and Slips, in favor of directing the Grand-street Ferry Company to put the ferry bridges, &c., in proper order, was adopted.

The Committee on Railroads having reported in favor of a concurrence in a resolution of the other Board directing the Sixth-avenue Railroad Company to repair their track, the motion to adopt the report was carried.

A resolution directing the Street Commissioner to advertise for proposals for removing the earth and rubbish from the West Washington Property, was referred, on the ground that it would be advisable, in the first place, to ascertain whether there was any earth or rubbish to be removed.

An ordinance for widening the carriage-way of Fifty-ninth-street, from the Fifth to the Eighth avenue, and which had already passed the Board of Aldermen, was adopted.

Numerous reports were received from the Committee on Fire Department, regarding applications for building or repairing engines, and were generally referred. That in favor of rebuilding, at an expense not to exceed $200, the carriage of Hose Company No. 26, was adopted.

The Mayor vetoed the resolution directing the Comptroller to purchase for the use of Hook and Ladder Co. No. 11, the lot No. 289 Henry-street. He based his refusal to approve the resolution on the ground that nearly all the residents in the vicinity of the lot in question, and the pastor and members of the Episcopal Church, (All Saints,) which is directly opposite, had remonstrated against it.

The Board adjourned till Thursday evening at 5 o'clock.

To the Public.

An expose by the Harbor Master of the Eighth District in relation to the controversy now existing between himself and the Agent of the Savannah line of steamers.

In the prompt, efficient and fearless discharge of those public duties with which I have been honored by the supreme authority of the State, I have been unjustly assailed and my motives misrepresented.

Sustaining, as I do, an intimate and responsible position to the best interests of this great commercial metropolis, and prompted by considerations of self-respect, I have deemed it my duty to present in this communication a clear, correct and just statement of this unpleasant affair.

And, in the first place, I shall proceed by quoting from an act, chapter 72, section 3, a portion of the law relating to the power vested in the Harbor Masters of the State of New-York, which is as follows:

"Section 3. Said Harbor Masters shall have authority to regulate and station all ships and vessels in the stream of the East or North River, within the limits of the City of New-York, and the wharves thereof, and to remove from time to time such ships or vessels as are not employed in receiving or discharging their cargoes, to make room for such others as require to be more immediately accommodated for the purpose of receiving or discharging their cargoes; and as to the fact of their being fairly and bona fide employed in receiving or discharging their cargoes, the said Harbor Masters, or either of them, is hereby constituted the sole judge."

Having thus shown the source of authority delegated to me in the discharge of my duties, I now proceed to examine the nature of the "dispatch" forwarded to his Excellency, Governor MORGAN, by the agent in question, wherein I am charged, first, with not permitting the steamship Huntsville to come to her berth. This charge has no foundation whatever in truth; for, by reference to the law above quoted, it will be seen that it was my prerogative, and not his, to assign to that ship a suitable berth under the existing circumstances. That berth was duly assigned by me, which by the said agent was as promptly refused, he (the agent) under the shadow of supposed power, preferring to anchor his vessel in the stream rather than conform to an expressed law of the State. In the second place, it is asserted that the owners of the line pay $2,500 per annum for the berth in question. This assertion is equally devoid of truth. For what consideration is this $2,400 paid? Is it for the exclusive use and possession of the berth? By no means. It is simply for the exclusive privilege of collecting the legal wharfage as established by law, and nothing more. The same may be said in regard to the property leased by the company from the Corporation, it being quite impossible for an individual or corporate body to grant privileges which would in any way contravene an express law of the State. In the third place, in his grandiloquent "despath" he informs Governor MORGAN that the steamer must remain in the stream unless he (the agent) submits to an extortion, or gets relief from executive interference. As regards the vessel being obliged to remain in the stream, that is a circumstance which concerns the agent, and not the Harbor Master, the former having refused to accept the berth assigned him, which was at the wharf in question. Touching the intimation conveyed by the agent involving the honor and integrity of the undersigned by the use of the term extortion, it is not necessary here to make any explanation. To the high and honored authority which clothed him with his present official position, and to his numerous friends, any explanation would be deemed superfluous and entirely out of place in a communication like the present. There are other tribunals before which matters of so grave a character are brought, and where injured honor must be defended. So much for the facts in connection with the charges contained in the dispatch to his Excellency Governor MORGAN; and it may not be unnecessary here to briefly review the whole matter in question. Having already shown that the right to station vessels is wholly and solely vested in the Harbor Master, and that no right whatever exists on the part of any corporate authority or individual, to grant for a price any special privileges at variance with the general welfare of the body politic, as expressed by law, the question naturally occurs, under what right does this agent demand any extraordinary privileges? Is there any legislative enactment conferring upon this Company or the agent thereof a right to completely inclose for storage purposes one of the finest wharves in the City, and this, too, to the entire exclusion of sailing vessels having equal claims to wharfage accommodation? Or is it the $2 500 which this agent pays for the privilege of collecting wharfage that gives him the power to monopolize the rights of others by occupying the various berths for only three or four days in a week, leaving some one or two of the berths constantly unoccupied, not including the four berths rendered useless on the north side of Pier No. 13. It has been stated that the present case furnishes a proper opportunity for the steamboat associations of the City to combine their influence for the purpose of invading the rights of duly constituted harbor-masters in the just and honest discharge of their duties. Will such a sentiment be received by any constituted authority created by the voice and suffrages of a free people? Will such an avowal be tolerated by the owners of the numerous sailing vessels who claim protection and support of all just governments? It is claimed from the same source that his Excellency Governor MORGAN, being a practical merchant, cannot do less than discharge the Harbor-Master, and fall in with the views of the above statement.

I have no answer to make to this surmise. I am willing to abide the practical judgment of Gov. MORGAN, confident that in the performance of my official duties, I have acted in strict conformity to the laws, and that a lawful and just discharge of obligations due to the public and the shipping interests will meet his calm and decided approval. I remain, respectfully,

CHARLES G. MURCH,
Harbor Master of the Eighth District of the Port of New-York, Office No. 73 West-street.

"FIRE-PROOF SAFES."
A FALSEHOOD NAILED.
TO THE PUBLIC.
Our reputation as manufacturers of a Safe that we honestly believe to be just what we represent it, viz., Fire and Burglar-Proof, demands, in justice to ourselves and the thousands who are using our Safes, that we should give a prompt and most unqualified denial to a report that the Alum Patent Safe had failed to preserve its contents at a recent fire at Key West, Fla. We presume that the report has emanated from the inventive brains of some jealous competitor, who resorts to this unmanly method to injure a reputation too firmly established for him to compete with in any fair or honorable way; but, be this as it may, we pronounce the report false in every particular. Another version of this report is to the effect that the Phenix Safe, manufactured by Holmes & Butler, and exhibited at the Crystal Palace, and a Wilder Patent Salamander Safe, both failed. That portion of it relating to Holmes & Butler, as makers of the Safe in question, is entirely destitute of truth, as we have ascertained and are prepared to prove that the Safe was in use in this section before the firm existed, and before the parties composing the firm of Holmes & Butler were even known to each other. It is true that H. & B. did make a Safe that was on exhibition at the Crystal Palace, and which was tested by fire to the satisfaction of the Committee appointed, and to the evident discomfiture of at least one rival Safe-maker and others, who would undoubtedly have experienced a similar defeat had they dared to accept the invitation to test Safes which was extended by the Committee to all Safe-makers. This Safe, which received the first and only premium for unqualified excellence, is now on exhibition at our store. In conclusion, we hereby offer a reward of one thousand dollars to any party that will prove our Alum Patent Safe has ever failed to preserve its contents when subjected to a trial by fire.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

BROOKLYN COMMON COUNCIL.—A meeting of this body was held last evening. A communication from the Fire Commissioners, proposing a plan to reorganize the Fire Department, was referred to the Joint Board. A resolution was adopted, authorizing the Corporation Counsellor to employ extra assistance at a compensation not to exceed $1,000 per annum. By resolution offered by Alderman JENKINS, the Manufacturers Bank (E. D.) was selected as a Bank of Deposit for the city money. A resolution directing the removal of the fence and fountain in front of the City Hall, and the paving of the same with Belgian pavement, was referred to the Grading and Paving Committee. The Mayor notified the Board that GAMALIEL KING and JOHN H. FUNK, recently appointed Water Commissioners, had filed their bonds. A report of the Gas Committee was adopted in favor of lighting that portion of the State Arsenal, used by the Second Division of the New-York State Militia, with gas, and another was adopted in favor of lighting Ryerson-street. A communication was received from the Counseller, notifying the Board that JOSEPH J. MARVIN had obtained a judgment against the City for his salary as Clerk of the Williamsburgh Commissioners. Some months ago a resolution, offered by Alderman DOUGLASS, was adopted, reducing the pay of the Clerk to $1 per annum. Judge LOTT decides that the salary of the office was once fixed by the Common Council and cannot be changed. The communication, with bill, was referred to the Finance Committee with power. The following was adopted: That all of the ordinances of the City, in reference to opening streets, &c., for the purposes of water and sewerage, be referred to the Law Committee for revision and report, in order that more stringent provisions may be enforced and greater security afforded to our citizens than the present insecure system of opening streets by plumbers. The Mayor was authorized to offer a reward of 50 cents for every dog delivered at the public pound before 1st October next, and the pound was ordered repaired and the pound-keeper was authorized to draw from the Comptroller twenty-five cents for each dog placed in his custody. A preamble and resolutions were offered by Alderman DOUGLASS, eulogizing the late Ex-Mayor CORNELIUS, and adopted unanimously. Alderman VAN BRUNT offered a resolution, "that it be referred to the Law Committee to inquire by what authority the Mayor has remitted fines and penalties, and given permits for the violation of the city ordinances, without transmitting his decision to the Common Council, in conformity with title 2, section 26 of the City Charter. The following ordinance was presented by Alderman DAYTON and adopted by a unanimous vote:

The Common Council do ordain as follows:

SECTION 1. The Aldermen of the several Wards shall have power to remove or cause to be removed any obstructions or incumbrances from all the streets, avenues, lanes, alleys, sidewalks, wharves and public places within their several Wards, and the expenses of such removal shall be paid out of the general fund unappropriated in the Treasury, and the financial officers of the city are authorized to audit and pay the same and to draw warrants therefor.

SEC. 2. It shall be the duty of any Alderman, who may exercise the power in the first section, to report the person causing any such obstruction or incumbrance, together with the amount of expenses incurred in such removal, to the Attorney and Counsellor, for prosecution.

SEC. 3. Any and every person who shall put or place upon any or either of such streets, avenues, lanes, alleys, sidewalks, wharves and public places, any obstructions or incumbrances contrary to law, shall be liable to pay the cost and expense of removing the same, and such cost and expense shall be recovered against them in such prosecution in addition to the penalty already provided by law.

ANOTHER BOY STABBED BY A COMPANION WHILE AT PLAY.—At about 11 o'clock yesterday morning, at the morning recess of Public School No. 10, on Fifteenth-street near Third avenue, Gowanus, two members of the school, named JOHN SHANNON and ELISHA TRAFFORD—the former ten and the latter nine years old—were engaged at play, when SHANNON stabbed TRAFFORD in the back, below the left shoulder-blade, inflicting a wound between three and four inches in depth. The weapon used was a common pocket-knife, with a long, narrow blade. Fortunately the blade entered in an upward direction, and did not touch the lungs or strike a vital part, which would have been the case had it entered in a straight line. The injured boy was taken to the residence of his parents on Third-avenue, near Seventeenth-street, where he was attended by Dr. WILLIAMS, of Gowanus. The boy SHANNON, as soon as he inflicted the wound, ran away from school, and went home, but was soon after arrested by Capt. MCLANE, of the Eighth Precinct Police, and committed to the cells. His version of the unfortunate affair is, that he was whittling, when TRAFFORD hit his elbow and annoyed him repeatedly. He tried to have him keep away, but when he found that he would not let him alone, he (SHANNON) stabbed him with the knife. As the thrust was made, THAFFORD turned to run away, which accounts for the wound being in the back. SHANNON'S parents reside in the rear of Tenth-street, near Third-avenue. They are respectable people, and are in deep distress at the conduct of their child. The wound inflicted is not necessarily fatal.

ALLEGED MALPRACTICE—THREE LIVES SACRIFICED.—Deputy-Coroner CASHOW arrested a woman named Mrs. EMMA LODGE, yesterday, on a charge of malpractice. It appears that on Friday last the accused attended the accouchement of Mrs. BRIDGET MCKINNEY, at No. 14 Rapelyea street. One child was born on Friday, and the patient was treated as though convalescent. She continued to grow worse, and on Sunday Dr. CUTLER was called in. He delivered the unfortunate woman of another child, but it was dead. The same day the mother and the other child died. Coroner HORTON was notified and took charge of the case. Yesterday a Jury was impanneled, and an investigation will be commenced to-day. At the request of the Coroner, Dr. BAUER made a post-mortem examination of the body of Mrs. KINNEY. He found what he considered unmistakeable evidence that the person officiating at the accouchement was entirely disqualified to act on such an occasion.

THE SOUTH-STREET BURGLARY.—On the night of the 20th July last, private watchman BUCKLEY encountered two burglars leaving the house of Mr. CAREY on South, near Livingston-street, and upon stopping them was severely wounded. EDWARD GRIFFITH was subsequently arrested and convicted as one of the burglars and the party who fired the pistol. Recently a rumor has gone abroad that a person lately arrested in New-York had acknowledged that he fired the pistol and that GRIFFITH was wrongfully imprisoned. Upon this statement several petitions are in circulation with a view to obtaining signers for a pardon. In conversation private Watchman BUCKLEY yesterday stated that he knew the man who shot him well by sight, and there is no possibility of his being mistaken in his identification. It is supposed that GRIFFITH'S accomplice in this affair is now under arrest in New-York, and private-watchman BUCKLEY is to identify him, if he can, to-day.

THE CEMETERY OF THE EVERGREENS DIFFICULTY.—Mr. JAMES FALLEN has applied to Judge CULVER, of the City Court, for an injunction against the present Trustees of the Evergreens Cemetery Company, to restrain them from acting in any official capacity in disposing of lots, or doing any business as officers of said Company. He alleges, that the legally elected Trustees are THOMAS PALMER, DAVID SYME, and JOHN HOOPE, and that these at present acting—Messrs. JOHNSON and COTHEAL—were not legally elected, and consequently their acts are null and void. The affidavits and papers in their case are in the hands of Judge CULVER, who will render a decision upon the motion at an early day.

THE KNIFE.—A fight took place late Saturday night, in HELBERG'S saloon, Union-avenue, Greenpoint, when PATRICK GALLAGHER inflicted a dangerous wound, with a knife, in the left breast of G. BRICKMAN. GALLAGHER was arrested by officer DODD of the 7th Precinct Police, and the injured man was taken home for medical treatment. He may recover.

FIRE.—The alarm of fire at 8½ o'clock last evening was caused by the burning of a smoke-house, No. 229 Tillary-street, owned by Mr. ROSENDORF. Loss $1,000—partially insured.

CITY COURT.—Calendar for this day—Nos. 60, Duffy vs. The Brooklyn City Railroad Company; 30, Sheppard vs. McConnan; 63, Smith vs. Nelson; 27, Benedict vs. Bonael; 48, Cecil vs. Remsen; 49, Cecil vs. Remsen.

THE TURF.

FINAL MATCH BETWEEN BILL CHEATHAM AND TAR RIVER.

FASHION COURSE, L. I.—Running Monday, June 27. Final match between Bill Cheatham and Tar River for $2,000, three-mile heats.

J. BEVINS' b. h. Bill Cheatham by Albion, dam by Berry's dam, 3 years, 104 lbs. 1 1

First mile	1:56	1:51
Second mile	1:53	1:47
Third mile	1:53	2:00
Total	5:42	5:38

The day was delightful, the track was in good order, and the horses appeared in fine condition. Cheatham was the favorite, $100 to $70, previous to starting, and won in two straight heats. The second heat is the fastest three-mile one on record. There was a numerous attendance.

UNION COURSE, L. I.—Trotting—Monday, June 27; purse and stake, $800; two mile heats in harness.

D. TALLMAN, br. g. Geo. Patchen 1 1
H. WOODRUFF, b. m. Lady Woodruff 2 2
D. PFEIFER, br. g. Brown Dick 3 3

First half mile	1:12	1:13½
First mile	2:27½	2:28½
Second mile	2:34	2:35
Total	5:13½	5:24½

Lady Woodruff was the favorite $100 to $60 previous to starting. There was a heavy amount of money bet on the trot. The "knowing ones" lost heavily as George Patchen won the race in two straight heats. The attendance was large, and it was a splendid trot, closely contested throughout. Patchen's appearance reflected the utmost credit on his trainer, and gave infinite satisfaction to his friends.

A Correction.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

You will please correct the statement in your LAW Report of the proceedings in the Court of General Sessions of Saturday, published in this day's edition of the TIMES, that "WILLIAM H. KIMBALL pleaded guilty to stealing some money from a fellow student in the Theological Seminary." He was not a student in the Seminary, but was attached to the Sunday School department of Trinity Church as a teacher, through which position he became simply a casual acquaintance with several students in the Seminary; hence, probably, the error in your report. By publishing this explanation you will remove any stigma that might possibly attach to the students of the Seminary in consequence of the error alluded to.

Respectfully, &c., PHILO VERITAS.

Mr. Van Dyck, Superintendent of public Instruction, has removed Philo B. Daily from the office of School Commissioner for Chemung County. Mr. D. was convicted of an assault upon a young lady who went to his office to obtain a certificate as a teacher.

MONDAY, June 27—P. M.

The Weekly Averages of the Banks of the City of New-York, on Saturday, June 25, 1859, present in the aggregate the following changes from the previous exhibit of June 18:

Decrease in Loans	$55,746
Decrease in Specie	1,432,336
Decrease in Circulation	66,068
Decrease in Undrawn Deposits	1,934,864

Including the Clearing-House operations of the week, which show the inter-exchanges between the Banks, and including also the Sub-Treasury statement of Saturday, the following is the general comparison with the previous exhibit, and also with the movement this time last season:

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

	June 26, 1858.	June 25, 1859.	June 18, 1859.
Capital	$66,717,000	$68,508,657	$68,508,657
Loans	118,823,401	121,744,449	121,800,195
Specie	31,948,089	21,750,881	23,192,217
Circulation	7,215,689	8,216,043	8,281,111
Gross Deposits	101,961,682	96,353,393	99,170,325
Exchanged	15,825,983	19,160,278	20,042,356
Undrawn	86,135 699	77,193,115	79,127,979
In Sub-Treasury	7,461 599	5,493,275	3,604,765

The Specie line shows rather better than expected after the transfer of $3,508,000 to the Sub-Treasury and Export account. The general inclination of the Discount line is downward, though the aggregate difference is small, on account of an increase in the Banks of Commerce, America, Merchants', and Shoe and Leather—supposed to be on the new Treasury Bills. The Deposit line is down nearly two millions, so that the percentage of Specie is still left 28¼ ₱ cent., or 8¼ ₱ cent. above the Clearing-house standard of security. For the new week the Bank Average will have the benefit of the California remittance of $2,041,000 which was delivered this morning. The Boston steamer will take $200,000 in gold bars, put up today. The Sub-Treasury paid $90,000 on Government drafts from the Pacific side, received by the present mail. The other payments to-day, $246,000. The receipts were $66,000 from Customs; $142,000 on account of Treasury Bills, and $112,000 other sources. The balance now stands $5,476,737.

Both the financial and political advices from Europe, by the Bremen, to June 14, published this morning, are favorably interpreted on 'Change but have had, thus far, no decided influence on the Money or Stock Markets. The former is steady in rates and comfortable in supply for the borrower. Lenders generally manifest a good confidence in the present look of affairs, with few exceptions, but claim the full advance recently made in the terms of interest. The Exchanges for the Boston mail rule steady. Sales on London, 110⅛@110¼, and on Paris f.5.11¼@f.5.10.

In Stocks, the business of the week opens dull, so far as the tone of the dealings is concerned, but steady on State Securities, and a fraction better than at the close on Saturday on most of the Railway Shares. New-York Central, in which there was but a moderate business, left off the same, 73@73⅛ ₱ cent. Reading in demand and the price ¼ ₱ cent. higher. Harlem Preference Shares were 1 ₱ cent. better, and the Western list ¼@½ ₱ cent. better, with, perhaps, less disposition to press sales on contract as at the close of last week. A considerable demand was shown for Michigan Guaranteed, and the bids were steady for Rock Island, Galena and Illinois Central. Only one or two small parcels of Michigan Central were offered; the price ¼ ₱ cent. higher. Pennsylvania Coal Shares improved to 83¼ ₱ cent., while a further decline of 1@1½ ₱ cent. was submitted to on Delaware and Hudson, closing about 89 cash and 88 seller 60 days. The sales of Panama were made at a decline of 1 ₱ cent. Pacific Mail closed 68 ₱ cent. The principal sales of Missouri Sixes were at 86½ ₱ cent, again. Railway Bonds generally steady, and offered only in a retail way. The general market finally left off steady.

We hear, to-day, of some further sales, in all about $130,000 of the new 6 ₱ cent. Treasury Bills at 100⅞@100½ ₱ cent., and $150,000 of 5½ ₱ cents. have been taken of the Sub-Treasurer at par. The Manhattan Company will pay off for the State of New-York on 1st July $100,000 old 5 ₱ cents. and $150,000 temporary loan. The Stock Exchange Board, this morning, resolved to take a substantial holiday season on the approaching National Anniversary. The Board will adjourn at the close of the morning session on Friday next, July 1, until the morning of Tuesday, July 5.

We understand that Mr. AUGUSTE BELMONT, New-York correspondent of the ROTHSCHILDS, will admit as partners in his business, after the 1st of July, Messrs. CHARLES CHRISTMAS and E. A. MATTHIESSEN, who have, for several years, (and during his residence at the Hague,) held his procuration. The firm will be AUGUSTE BELMONT & Co. They have taken a new suite of banking offices in the Griswold Building, No. 50 Wall-street, opposite the Merchants' Exchange. After the late removal of the American Exchange Bank, Mr. GRISWOLD remodeled his building, so as to make sixteen offices, eight on the first floor and the same number on the gallery above. Mr. BELMONT takes a suite of four, and Messrs. H. A. JOHNSON & Co., of the Stock Exchange, a suite of three, on the first floor.

The Panama half-yearly dividend of 6 ₱ cent. is payable on Friday, July 1, two weeks earlier than usual. The Company are advised to-day, of a large Specie business over the line, when the Moses Taylor left, in addition to the California treasure bound for New-York.

We find on inquiry that the following sums for the July Interest on the Public Debt of the Federal and State Governments, are to be disbursed in this City, on and after Friday next, July 1. Provision, we believe, has already been made in every instance. The Treasurer of Michigan has not yet designated the place at which he will be found, but there is no doubt that he will be here in person or by proxy.
